Senate May Vote Today on Home Rule

Urgent Note Is Sounded On Treaty, Arms Action

By the United Press

President Truman is expected to ask congressional leaders today for a speedup in ratifying the North Atlantic Defense Pact and approval of $1,450,000,000 in American arms aid for "free nations."

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.), told a reporter he will discuss the twin foreign policy issues with Mr. Truman at the White House this morning and that a decision on a speedup probably will be forthcoming later in the day.

Administration leaders are concerned that delays in ratifying the 12-nation anti-aggression pact might force abandonment of congressional action on the related arms-for-Europe plan.

This note of urgency has been relayed to Senate leaders from Secretary of State Dean Acheson, now attending the Big Four parley at Paris.

Decision Due Today

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.), of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said the pact probably will be sent to the Senate floor for debate late this week. And he said he expected to be able to open debate next Monday if the leadership gives the word.

To back up the drive for speed, State Department officials and Connally's staff of experts worked over the holiday weekend to rush action on a voluminous report defending the treaty as the Western world's best bet for avoiding World War III.

Lucas said decision on the schedule will be reached at a meeting of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee late today.

Heretofore the leadership has relegated the pact to a place on the Senate calendar behind such controversial legislation as extension of the reciprocal trade agreements program and repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor law.

Warning of "Grave Results"

A top-ranking State Department spokesman said delays in ratifying the pact and in Senate and House approval of the arms program might have "grave" results abroad. Acheson, too, has sounded this theme, maintaining that U. S. foreign policy cannot fluctuate with Soviet action "raising and lowering the international temperature."

The State Department, too, moved for speedup action this weekend through assurances to Congress that no "secret deals" were made in negotiating the treaty and that Italy's rearmment is not contemplated.

Regarding Italy, the department informed the committee in writing that the former enemy nation will not be rearmed in violation of the Allied peace treaty, which the United States, Russia and 19 other nations signed.

In answer to questions from several Senators, the department flatly asserted that "no secret additional protocols" are carried in the pact and that none were made in its negotiation.

Republicans Draw Up Own Health Plan

Nine members of Congress yesterday proposed a new, voluntary health insurance plan designed to provide the same care to the poor and well-to-do, at a cost scaled to each person's income.

The bill, intended as a substitute for President Truman's compulsory insurance plan, will be introduced today by two Senators and seven Representatives, all Republicans.

The sponsors, who said the bill would avoid "the errors of state socialism," are:

Senators Ives (N. Y.) and Flanders (Vt.) and Representatives Clifford P. Case (N. J.), Fulton (Pa.), Hale (Me.), Herter (Mass.), Javits (N. Y.), Morton (Ky.), and Nixon (Calif.).

They said the plan is "designed to bring within everybody's reach all the care that the Nation's medical facilities can provide."

The whole plan would be voluntary. People could subscribe or not as they choose. Doctors, hospitals and States could join or stay out.

A subscriber would pay in 3 per cent of his income, up to $5000. The sponsors figure most of the cost would be met by the subscriptions—which would average $114 per year per family.

Deficits would be made up by Federal and State governments. The maximum cost for the Federal Government is estimated at $300,000,000 the first year and about $850,000,000 four years later.

The Truman plan, on the other hand, is estimated by its backers to cost about six billion dollars a year. To provide medical, hospital and other services for some 120,000,000 Americans the Administration plan calls for payroll taxes and contributions out of general

Tydings Calls for Strong U. S. At Arlington Memorial Rites

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

The United States must be strong enough to make sure that we will not be honoring another Unknown Soldier in the future, Senator Tydings (D., Md.) told some 6000 persons at the Arlington Amphitheater yesterday.

Senator Tydings, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, was the main speaker at the traditional exercises at Arlington, commemorating the Nation's dead of all wars on the eighty-first Memorial Day.

A brilliant sun shone on the National Cemetery, and a crisp breeze fluttered the flags decorating the thousands of military graves in the green and spotless grounds.

Besides those at the formal Amphitheater program, uncounted other thousands honored the monuments in the cemetery or paid personal homage to individual fallen heroes of their own.

Encouraged by the weather, thousands of Washingtonians enjoyed as long as possible the three-day holiday weekend, the return to the city beginning in midafternoon.

Visitors, who had come into the area in numbers almost as large as the vacationing throngs who left the city, began to leave at about the same time.

The Union Terminal, National Airport, bus terminals and highways were crowded as the evening wore on. Railroads and airlines added extra facilities on many of their runs into the city.

The possible showers predicted by the Weather Bureau yesterday afternoon or evening failed to materialize, and will probably hold off until this afternoon, forecasters said.

Like many of the speakers at the various observances in the area and throughout the Nation, Senator Tydings sounded the keynote for a strongly defended Amer-

Toll of Dead Reaches 338 On Holiday

By The Associated Press

The Memorial Day weekend death toll rose last night to 338 as weary motorists rolled homeward.

With several hours remaining before the heavy holiday gantlet would end, traffic mishaps took 210 lives. Seventy-one persons drowned. The other 57 died from a variety of accidents.

The National Safety Council predicted that 215 persons would be killed in traffic between 6 p. m. Friday and midnight Monday.

The deaths by States (traffic, drowning, miscellaneous):

British Store Unit To Oust Fascists And Communists

London, May 30 (U.P.).—The John Lewis partnership—one of Britain's biggest department store combines—announced tonight it would purge all Communists and Fascists from its payroll of 12,000 workers.

Home Secretary James Chuter Ede had advised the Lewis partnership to "forget" its projected political purge.

The partnership's central council, comprising shop girls, factory workers and department chiefs, voted 60 to 41 by secret ballot tonight to expel "all Communists, Fascists and other totalitarians."

Store officials said those dismissed would be given three months's notice to find other jobs "providing more congenial atmosphere for their disruptive activities."

Son of Boss Barred From Voting by Ruling of NLRB

Can the boss' son vote in a plant election?

"No," said the National Labor Relations Board yesterday as it ordered an election among truck drivers at the Brooklyn (N. Y.) plant of the Broadway Iron & Pipe Corp.

The board ruled that two truck drivers who are sons of Hyman Scheer, the company president, shall be excluded from the bargaining unit because "their interests seem to be more closely allied with those of management than with those of the employes."

The election will be held within 30 days and the workers will choose either (1) the AFL Teamsters, (2) the AFL Retail Clerks, (3) or "no union."

Nearly Half Annapolis Class Given Extracurricular Awards

Annapolis, Md., May 30 (AP).—Nearly half of the 791 graduating midshipmen at the Naval Academy got awards today for their athletic prowess and participation in activities at "The Yard" outside their classroom work.

Varsity athletes—179 of them—were the center of attention at the ceremonies in Thompson Stadium.

They and their gaily gowned girl friends also were in the limelight at the day's main social function—the "N" dance.

The wearers of the varsity "N" and their dates gathered at Hubbard Hall, the Academy boathouse, for a dance that is by tradition the swankiest of June Week commencement activities.

Academy "drags," particularly belles from Annapolis, Washington and Baltimore, maneuver all through the school year for a bid to the affair.

While the exclusive affair was on at Hubbard Hall, the other middies and their June Week guests whirled at Dahlgren and MacDonough Halls at a plain, ordinary hop.

Besides the athletes honored at this morning's ceremonies, some 230 other midshipmen received awards for their achievements in such activities as debating, dramatics and glee club.

Two of the top athletic awards were announced, but will not be presented until Tuesday.

John (Wheel) Barrow of New Bloomfield, Mo., captain of the Middie basketball team as well as pole vaulter, hurdler and high jumper on the track team, will receive the Thompson Trophy Cup awarded the midshipman doing the most during the year for athletics.

Lee Chambers of Baltimore, whose 144 goals in lacrosse competition set a record for Navy men, will get the Naval Athletic Association binoculars for personal excellence in athletics. Chambers

All-Germany Bonn Plan Is Rejected

By Walter Kerr

Paris, May 30 (NYHT).—Andrei Y. Vishinsky, Soviet Foreign Minister, rejected outright this afternoon, extension of the Bonn constitution to the eastern zone of Germany, which the United States, Britain and France proposed on Saturday.

As anticipated, he did not even accept it as a basis for discussion and took time once again to press for his own program for the reimposition of four-power controls and the creation of an all-German state council for economic and administrative affairs.

This brought the situation in the Council of Foreign Ministers to a stand-off, with the Russians as unwilling to discuss Western plans as the Western delegates are hesitant to examine details of the Russian project.

Air of Fencing Continues

As in previous meetings, no hot words were exchanged and the general atmosphere of fencing before serious negotiation was maintained. No one considered the Soviet rejection catastrophic because no one had anticipated acceptance.

The day's proceedings confirmed the opinion that the Soviet government called off its land blockade of Berlin and asked for this conference with a limited objective in mind. In the opinion of Western observers, the Soviet plan is to continue the political division of Germany temporarily and search for an economic working agreement that would give eastern Germany and eastern Europe access to the manufactured goods and raw materials of the West.

Only subsequent negotiation can tell whether this can be realized but it is already clear that no agreement can be reached here on the means of achieving German political and economic unity. Extension of the principles contained in the Bonn Constitution was a Western condition, not a bargaining point, and Vishinsky made no counter-proposal in the same sense. On the contrary he intimated once again that he did not come here to discuss such a far-reaching subject.

Not Related, He Says

Reparations and the foreign ownership of German factories were questions not related to German unity, he said, refusing as last week to be drawn out on these fundamental issues.

Vishinsky's rejection included these points: That the constitution was drawn up secretly, that it was undemocratic and contrary to the wishes of the German people, that its trend to federalism would lead to the dismemberment of the country and that it guaranteed freedoms already existing in the Eastern zone.

He opposed the Western conception of an occupation statute as amounting to a refusal to prepare a peace treaty and meaning indefinite continuation of occupation. The whole project, he said, was an attempt to dictate to the Germans and to the Soviet government. Furthermore, it was contrary to the Potsdam agreement. He then repeated his own plan.

Dean G. Acheson, American Secretary of State; Ernest Bevin, British Foreign Secretary, and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman defended the Western program as something closer to the wishes of the German people.

Bevin, in particular, tried to extract from the Russian a statement that his government now rejected the idea of a central

President Back After Weekend Cruise Down Bay

President Truman returned late yesterday from a weekend holiday cruise on the Potomac and Chesapeake Bay.

The President went directly to Blair House after the yacht Williamsburg put in.

The Williamsburg anchored overnight off Blackistone Island, just below Colonial Beach, Va. It weighed anchor at 10:30 a. m. EDT for the homeward trip.

The party arrived here at 5 p. m. The President came ashore 35 minutes later.

Mr. Truman interrupted his cruise at Annapolis, Md., Sunday to join 791 Naval Academy fourth-year men at the baccalaureate service in the Academy chapel.

33,081 See Nats, Yanks Split; Snead, Palmer in PGA Final

THE NATS, behind Walter Masterson, hung a 6-2 beating on the league-leading New York Yankees in the first game of their doubleheader before 33,081 fans at Griffith Stadium, but that finished them. The Yanks romped in the nightcap, 13-3.

AROUND THE LEAGUE, the Boston Red Sox moved into second place with two victories over Philadelphia, 10-2 and 4-3; Cleveland won twice from the Chicago White Sox, 2-1 and 5-0; and Detroit dropped a 2-1 finale after winning its opener, 3-2, from St. Louis.

NATIONAL LEAGUE action was featured by the St. Louis Cardinals' jump into fourth place with a double triumph, 8-6 and 9-2, over Cincinnati. Three teams—Boston, Brooklyn and New York—remained in a deadlock for first, each splitting a double bill.

THE PGA FINAL at Richmond's Hermitage Country Club today will be a battle between Sam Snead and Johnny Palmer, victors by opposite methods in yesterday's semifinals. Snead came from three down to defeat Jim Ferrier, 3 and 2, and Palmer led almost from the start to hang a 6-and-5 defeat on Lloyd Mangrum.

Hickenlooper Uses Calculated Fear Tactics, Lilienthal Says

By the United Press

David E. Lilienthal yesterday accused Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) of a "calculated" attempt to arouse fears of an "approaching collapse" in the atomic bomb program with "vague, un-American" statements.

The chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission denounced Hickenlooper's charges against him as "calculated to arouse fear and distrust and a feeling of approaching calamity."

Hickenlooper had accused Lilienthal of "incredible mismanagement" of the vast atomic energy program and demanded that President Truman fire him.

Lilienthal issued his blast as the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee was set to consider at a special meeting today Hickenlooper's offer to confront Lilienthal with the "proof" of his mismanagement charges.

It came shortly after the Federation of American Scientists had urged that the proposed investigation of the AEC management cover "its areas of positive achievement" as well as any possible shortcomings.

Describing himself as "pretty damn mad," Lilienthal said Hickenlooper's charges were so "grave" that they could undermine public confidence in the atomic program.

Hickenlooper, informed of Lilienthal's statement, said the atomic official seemed to be commenting on the "evidence" even before it was produced.

"That's all right," the Senator said. "We will produce the evidence in due time. And when the evidence is produced, the committee and the public will be the judge.

"If the evidence is not sufficient, the committee and the public will be the judge of that, too."

Lilienthal leveled fire on Hickenlooper during an interview with representatives of two news wire services. He said those criticizing the way he has handled the atomic program hope to "break my health." But he added, in a voice filled with emotion, that such efforts would fail.

"My health will take care of itself . . . our work will go forward," he said.

Hickenlooper, a ranking member and former chairman of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee, last week protested that Lilienthal's commission was "staggering under daily disclosures of evidence of incredible mismanagement." He said "numerous persons" employed by the commission have "strong Communistic leanings."

Lilienthal, alternately pounding a table in his big office and speaking in a hushed voice, demanded a showdown.

"This can't be treated as simply a scuffling match or 'giving bureaucrats hell'," he said. "The charges are so grave in language that they are difficult to understand as anything other than aimed to undermine confidence of the people of this country and western

Mob Lynches Young Negro In Georgia

Irwinton, Ga., May 30 (AP).—A young Negro was taken from a jail cell in the sheriff's residence early today and shot and beaten to death.

The Negro, Calif Hill, jr., 28, was arrested after a disturbance about midnight at a Negro roadhouse. Sheriff George Hatcher said Hill had seized his gun and fired at him when he arrested him.

The sheriff said Hill had "the worst reputation I'd ever heard of" and that he had arrested Hill several times before.

After placing Hill in jail, the sheriff called State troopers and went back to the roadhouse to get his pistol, which had been taken from him in the scuffle. Two unmasked white men then slipped into the jail on the second floor of his home and took Hill, Hatcher said.

Hatcher had left his keys on the table in the dining room of his home. His wife and daughter were asleep in downstairs rooms.

Another Negro prisoner in the jail, Tom Carswell, said he saw the two men enter, and "they really looked like they were coming to get Hill." Carswell could not identify them.

Mrs. Hatcher said she heard a car drive up to the jail and a door slam, but thought it was her husband returning.

A six-man coroner's jury ruled that Hill "came to his death by gunshot wounds, being shot through the head by hands unknown."

Coroner C. C. Thompson said he would not remove the bullet unless ordered to by "higher authority—somebody like the Governor."

"If we had a gun to match the bullet with, or some suspects, it would be different," Thompson said. "But we haven't got a gun or any suspects."

Carswell, who was in the same cell with Hill, testified the slain man made no struggle or plea of any kind when the two white men told him: "Come on, let's go."

Carswell said he knew virtually everybody in this area and that he had never seen the two men before and could not identify them if he saw them again.

Concrete Advice to Be Sought By Senators on D. C. Slums

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

A Senate Banking subcommittee "pilot" study of District slums—just started—soon will seek concrete slum clearance suggestions from both private and public housing officials.

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.), chairman of the Banking Subcommittee on Housing, revealed last night that his group had already launched a "broad and continuing" study of local housing "from all angles."

In this way, said Sparkman, the city's approach to its housing problem will stay under the congressional microscope as a case in point for the whole Nation.

An outline of the committee study, indicating its scope and direction, was furnished to The Washington Post.

It will involve preliminary public hearings before Congress adjourns this summer, and requests for slum clearance recommendations from all Federal and local housing officials and the private building industry.

The builders will be asked their plans for supplying low rent private housing, including estimated number of units and expected rental charges.

Public housing spokesmen will be queried on the same point. The District Redevelopment Land Agency also will be called to spell out its long-range program for slum clearance.

The case study of District substandard housing was first suggested by Senator Sparkman six weeks ago.

Financed out of a portion of the full committee's recent $60,000 allocation for investigations this year, the local study is being conducted to serve a twofold purpose.

Sparkman said it will:

1. Focus congressional attention on assuring an aggressive attack on local slum housing, much of

Southern Support Seen For District Measure

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Senate today will resume consideration of the District home rule bill.

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), the bill's floor manager, said last night he was "hopeful of a final vote Tuesday." He said he saw no reason for extended debate because "this matter has been considered over a period of several years."

Senator Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), chairman of the Senate District Committee, said he is "quite confident" the bill will pass if it comes to a vote.

The Senator, a leading advocate of home rule, was in Providence, R. I., to speak this morning at the commencement exercises of Providence College.

He said he planned to return to Washington this afternoon and would decide then whether he personaly would take the floor to speak for the measure.

"The bill as it stands now should have support from both sides of the aisle," he said. "Both Democrats and Republicans contributed to it."

He said he felt the measure should be cleared by the Senate "in two or three days" at the most.

Debate began on the measure last Friday before the holiday recess. The measure has strong bipartisan support.

Only one amendment has thus far been offered to the bill. Submitted by Senators James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) and Olin D. Johnson (D., S. C.), the amendment would ban any change in the local race segregation pattern without a public referendum and a positive vote by Congress, as well.

On the other hand, the bill appears likely to win the votes of a number of Southern Senators who appear to be following the cue of Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.), leader of the Southern bloc in its fight against civil rights measures. Russell told reporters he did not consider the home rule bill a civil rights measure.

Senator Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.) was one of Friday's speakers for the bill while Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) also has declared he will vote for the measure.

Three other Southern Democrats indicated to The Washington Post yesterday they, too, expect to vote for the bill to restore home rule to Washington after a lapse of three quarters of a century.

Senator Allen J. Ellender (La.) said he believes "strongly" in "letting people elect their own officials." He said he would be willing to leave the matter of changes in the mixed segregation situation in the District to the decision of the voters at a referendum.

Senator Frank Graham (N. C.) said he was "in every way disposed to vote for home rule for the District."

"I'll vote 'aye,'" he said.

Senator J. William Fulbright (Ark.) said he had not studied the bill in detail, but added:

"I think I'll probably vote for it."

The bill would abolish the present commission form of District government and set up in its place an 11-man city council. Nine of the members would be elected at large, while the other two would be appointed by the President. The Board of Education would be a seven-member elected body.

The sprawling city government would be streamlined into 12 executive departments under control of a city manager as the executive head of the city. The city manager would be named by the council and be subject to removal at any time.

The present court system would not be altered by the home rule measure.

If the bill passes both Senate and House and is signed by the President at this session, it would be put up to the public in a referendum this November for acceptance or rejection.

The home rule bill contains no provisions for national representation for the District, a matter which the lawyers are convinced can be approved only by a constitutional amendment.

A wide franchise would be established by the bill, permitting Government employes in Washington to vote in the local elections even though they maintain legal residences back home and vote in the States.

The bill came to the Senate floor last Friday afternoon on motion of Majority Leader Scott Lucas. When Senator Johnson objected, Lucas called for a vote and the bill was made the pending business on a voice vote.

Following are excerpts from Friday's floor discussion of the home rule measure:

Senator Kefauver:

"We who are citizens of the states — citizens of the United States—like to think of Washington, the Nation's Capital, as the

Hoover Feels U. S. Can Cut Payroll 10%

The Government could "accomplish exactly the same purposes" with 10 per cent fewer civilian employes if it were properly organized, former President Herbert Hoover said yesterday.

Savings to taxpayers, which he has previously estimated at an eventual three billion dollars a year, might even reach four or five billions, Hoover said in an interview published by the magazine United States News and World Report.

Hoover said he based his figures on reports of research "task forces" of the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch, of which he is chairman. The body has sent Congress 19 bulky volumes of reorganization recommendations.

Sees No Wholesale Firings

A cut of 200,000 in Federal personnel would require no wholesale firings, Hoover said. He added it could be accomplished through normal turnover, which now runs 500,000 a year.

While Congressmen generally are "enthusiastic" over Government reform, Hoover stated, each has "little vested interests" in his district which want exemption from the proposed wholesale overhaul.

Every Government bureau, he said, has the backing of "some sort of citizens' association whose interests lie in promoting it." These bring pressure on Congress to protect the agencies from merger or abolition, the former President said.

Only public opinion can force the needed reforms, he declared—"if the public insists and demands it, then the plans will be realized."

Favors Senate Proposal

Hoover spoke well of the recurrent proposal that former Presidents become nonvoting members of the Senate.

"I don't want to go there at my time of life, but I think as an addition to the efficiency of the Government it would be greatly worthwhile for the future," he said.

Asked how he manages to look as well as he does and work so hard at 74, the former President replied:

"By living a life as near perfect rectitude as the limitations of mankind permit."

House Democrats Deadlocked on Formula To Prevent National Emergency Strikes

By The Associated Press

Democrats on the House Labor Committee remained deadlocked yesterday over one knotty provision of a new bill they intend to offer as a substitute for the Taft-Hartley Labor Act.

Some of them said they hope a compromise can be reached in the next few days. Others said prospects for an agreement are dim.

The issue is how to deal with labor disputes which threaten the national health or safety—the so-called national emergency strikes.

Chairman Lesinski (D., Mich.) has called a meeting of the committee's 16 Democrats for Wednesday to tackle the subject again. Two such sessions—both fruitless—have been held since the House rejected early this month a lab r bill backed by Republicans and Southern Democrats.

Democrat Offers Changes

New support showed up in the Senate, meanwhile, for changes in the Truman Administration labor bill, which is designed to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act and reinstate the New Deal Wagner Act with some alterations.

Senator Withers (D., Ky.), who once opposed any changes in the Administration bill, came out for a series of amendments. One of these would give the President limited authority to seize struck plants in national emergencies. Withers acknowledged that even if his amendments are adopted the Administration bill will have "tough sailing" in the Senate.

Opponents of the Administration bill claim powerful support for a substitute offered by Senator Taft (R., Ohio) and two of his colleagues which would make 28 changes in the Taft-Hartley Act but retain much more of it than the Administration favors.

In the House Committee, the principal stumbling block in the path of a Democratic-sponsored compromise centers around the present provision for injunctions against unions to enforce a cooling-off period of up to 80 days. During this interval, a board appointed by the President studies the dispute.

The Administration's bill, generally indorsed by labor unions, would substitute a presidential request for a 30-day truce. A board would study the dispute and recommend terms or a settlement. AFL and CIO leaders both have vowed they would abide by the President's cooling-off requests.

U. S. Seizure Proposed

The argument in the committee is between these two extremes. Representative Jacobs (D., Ind.) has proposed a plan for keeping part of a strike-threatened industry going while part is idle. Representative Burke (D., Ohio) has suggested compulsory negotiation for a 60-day period.

Another proposal is that the Government seize any vital industry faced with a strike. Under this, the Government would pay operating costs, take the profits, if any, and compel workers to stay at their jobs. Some committee members favor this plan.

Others, however, have objected as strongly to the seizure idea as to injunctions against unions. Union leaders are virtually unanimous in opposing injunctions.

Housing Bill Faces Test as to 'Who's Boss'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The House Rules Committee, technically deprived of most of its power to road-block legislation, faces another showdown with the House leadership this week.

The test of "who's boss" in the House will come when the committee votes Wednesday on whether to clear the Administration's long-range housing bill to the House.

If the committee votes "yes," the long struggle will be over and the House Banking Committee's housing bill, already passed in modified form by the Senate, will go to the House floor next week—the first public housing bill to run a Rules Committee blockade.

If a coalition majority of Republicans and Southerners vote "no," the House Democratic leadership will make the first use of a new rule adopted last January designed to smash just such a barricade.

With the housing bill topping the "Fair Deal" program, leaders are determined to get it to the House by one route or another. What will happen to it there may be open to question, but at least members would have their first chance to vote on it.

With the Rules Committee division reported "close," Rules Chairman Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.), a strong advocate of the housing measure, last Wednesday adjourned the committee a week.

To Demand Roll Call

Yesterday he disclosed that on Wednesday he will demand a roll call on the bill so that every member's vote will be known.

Administration forces were reported hopeful of picking up at least one Republican vote and one Southern Democratic vite—enough to report the housing bill to the floor.

But if the vote is adverse, House Banking Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.), with the support of House Democratic leaders, will give the anti-blockade rule its first workout.

All Spence has to do is file a resolution requesting a rule. If the committee fails to act within 21 days, Speaker Rayburn, under the new procedore, would recognize Spence for a motion to call up the housing bill on the next "discharge" day.

Only drawback is it will take the Administration a little longer to get the bill on the floor. Even that delay might have been obviated if Spence had filed his resolution formally requesting a rule on the day he reported his housing bill, May 16.

While the House is awaiting the Rules Committee test it will mark time on comparatively minor measures Tuesday and on Wednesday will head into its second bout on veterans' pensions.

Only this time Representative John J. Rankin (D., Miss.) has watered down his original multi-billion pension request to a comparatively mild measure granting little more to the veterans than they are entitled to under present law.

The House will round out the week by considering another "Fair Deal" measure—liberalized displaced persons legislation—on Thursday and Friday.

With all appropriations bills passed, the House will be concentrating on other key Truman measures before it heads into the adjournment stretch.

Slowly shaping up in the Labor Committee for another House try in late June or early July is a Taft-Hartley repeal bill that may include National emergency injunction provisions and possibly a "State's rights" closed shop plank.

A social security bill, with some broadening of coverage and benefits, may come out of the House Ways and Means Committee in two weeks.

House leaders haven't even abandoned hope for "some parts" of the President's health program and a minimum wage law in some form.

These were still bogged down in committee however, along with the Senate-passed Federal aid to education bill.

New taxes? House leaders have never flatly ruled them out but Republicans say the answer is economy. Look out for more expenditure slashing.

Slum Study Is Outlined

which is within sight of the Capitol.

2. Provide an "easy-to-study concrete pilot test" of the country-wide slum clearance and public housing program, expected to get under way if the pending national housing bill becomes law.

"An analysis of the local situation," said Sparkman yesterday, "may well serve to demonstrate to us how the law may be expected to work on a national basis."

The Senator emphasized that the local "pliot test" will continue to take the "broad point of view" on improving Washington living standards—"not the narrow public housing viewpoint or any other narrow concept "of the housing problem."

Preliminary Meetings Held

He said his committee staff already has had preliminary meetings with local housing people in further efforts to give the hearings "direction" and to insure that all phases of the housing problem will be probed.

The congressional case study of Washington "slumitis" will have will have the cooperation of the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency's research division.

The just-completed outline for the "Housing in the Nation's Capital" probe gives a tentative list of witnesses and some questions they will be asked.

Among them are the Census Bureau to bring up to date data on population growth and the number of unfit dwellings by decades, including the proportion occupied by whites and Negroes.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission will be queried on its "comprehensive plan for Washington" in terms of housing sites for all population elements and appropriations needed to carry out its phase of the redevelopment picture.

Area Officials To Be Heard

The study will extend to nearby Maryland and Virginia county officials who will be asked for data on population shifts in the Metropolitan area.

Private real estate interests will be asked to estimate "what rentals by size and number of accommodations you are now supplying, or dwellings in which you are financially interested?" They also will be queried on "What efforts (success or failure) have been made to supply low-cost private housing? Plans for the future?"

Builders also wil be questioned on their proposals to (1) increase the number of larger rental units and (2) to reduce rents.

The committee will request a detailed statement from the District Health Department on additional legislation and personnel necessary to enforce a housing enforcement attack on substandard housing.

The Board of Welfare will be asked to outline their program for supporting indigents, with particular reference to budgetink for rent payments.

Police and court officials will be questioned on crime and juvenile delinquency in "deteriorated areas" and in existing public housing projects.

The Board of Trade, United States Chamber of Commerce and labor groups will be asked to spell out the effect of slums and overcrowding on the business and social interests of the community.

Other agencies listed in the case study outline include: National Capital Housing Authority, Housing and Home Finance Agency, Recreation Department, Rent Control administrator, District Board of Condemnation and the Veterans' Information Center.

F. D. Roosevelt, Jr., Won't Tempt 13 Jinx

Paris, May 30 (AP).—Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., told a news conference today he's a respecter of the "13" superstition and will wait until June 14 to go to Washington as a new member of Congress from New York. He said he picked up the superstition while serving in the Navy.

Roosevelt will leave Paris Wednesday night. He will fly to Israel to "look over the general picture and the housing situation," he said.

New Cuts Forecast For Commodities

New York, May 30 (AP).—Many commodity prices which have not yet turned downward from their postwar peaks soon will start sharp declines, editors of the 1949 Commodity Year Book said today.

Such commodities include building materials and some metal products, which the editors described as still relatively high-priced. These can be expected to follow the price decline pattern already set by foods, textiles and others, according to the year book, published by Commodity Research Bureau, Inc.

"Specific commodities or groups may lag or go contrary to the trend of the over-all average, but in the long run they tend to follow," the price study said.

Farm products were cited as a "highly sensitive" commodity group which usually precedes others in general price swings. Textile products also were mentioned as a group which often leads in any major change such as the recent postwar commodity decline.

The chapter on "how commodity prices move" is one of several original research studies in the new edition.

Others include an analysis of modern hedging practices on futures exchanges, a study of Government price support programs, and a discussion of domestic transportation of commodities.

Annual statistical and chart compilations for each of the basic commodities of agriculture and industry are included as usual.

Coal Operators May Ask U. S. Mediation

By the United Press

Coal operators said yesterday they probably will ask the Government today to step into their wage contract dispute with John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers.

The dispute threatens a Nation-wide strike when the current wage agreement expires on June 30.

Joseph E. Moody, president of the Southern Coal Producers Association said yesterday he will notify Federal Mediation Director Cyrus S. Ching that the operators and union have not yet completed an agreement to replace the present contract.

Moody said he would act today or Wednesday before he heads back to Bluefield, W. Va., to make a new try at starting negotiations with Lewis.

Upon receiving the notice, Ching probably will assign an observer to attend the Bluefield conferences.

Lewis forced a one-week delay in starting contract talks by demanding that Moody show certified bargaining authority and tonnage for each company he claimed to represent in the negotiations.

The miners' chief will have an opportunity to discuss the status of current negotiations during his scheduled appearance today before the Senate Labor Subcommittee on coal mine safety.

Husband Slays Wife, Couple Protecting Her, Then Himself

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 30 (AP).—An automobile salesman, threatened with divorce, shot to death his heiress wife and a couple who tried to protect her early today. Then he killed himself with the shotgun.

The husband was Richard R. Peppler, 47.

His victims, besides himself, were his wife, Frances, a 30-year-old brunet; Richard Sieswerda, 32, who was preparing for a law career, and Sieswerda's wife, Stella, 30.

Police said Peppler, estranged from his wife for a month, broke into their fashionable home in East Grand Rapids at 2:45 a. m.

Mrs. Sieswerda was attending Mrs. Peppler as a social worker from a local hospital. Police said Sieswerda apparently was staying at the Peppler home to protect the two women. Peppler was under court order not to molest his wife, after Mrs. Peppler asked police protection.

Sieswerda apparently grappled with Peppler after Mrs. Sieswerda was shot as she lay in bed.

After killing Sieswerda, officers said, Peppler followed his fleeing wife outdoors and shot her in the back. The body of Peppler, shot in the chest, was nearby.

Doctors Hold Congress on Rheumatism

New York, May 30.—The seventh International Congress on Rheumatic Diseases, which are the greatest single cause of sickness in the United States, met here today.

Attending are 150 foreign and about 400 American doctors, all experts on rheumatism, arthritis and similar afflictions.

In the United States, the conference was told, there are seven million people who go to doctors because of their intense rheumatic and arthritic pains. A far larger number suffers silently. The numbers exceed heart disease, cancer and tuberculosis combined.

The cases of the worst forms are not even known. Doctors Henrik Seyffarth and Kirsten Moinichen of Oslo, Norway, reported today that faulty posture and nervous tension in work account for about half the pains of women clerks who seem to have rheumatism. These pains hit especially in those muscles where work requires an unchanging position.

Doctors S. H. Bensley and A. W. Ham, of Toronto, said the worst forms of arthritis originate in the connective tissues.

Dr. Karl Meyer, Columbia University, New York, reported finding two sugars and one acid that may account for part of the connective pains.

Dr. Charles Ragan, New York, said that rheumatic fever does not hit the heart alone. It affects nearly all the body's connective tissues, as well.

A Stanford University group reported that the new drug aureomycin, used on animals only, is as good as gold salts. The group has not tried aureomycin on human arthritis. Penicillin and X-rays make the animal arthritis worse.

Woman, 24, Raped In Mississippi; Five Detained

Meridian, Miss., May 30 (AP).—Police Chief O. A. Booker said today he is holding five men in connection with a rape here last night.

Booker said no charges had been filed against any of the men.

Booker said the woman was seized, dragged into a clump of trees and attacked shortly after 9 p. m. Sunday as she was walking home from a meeting at Meridian Junior College. The attack took place about a block from the college, the chief added.

Booker said she is in a "fair condition at Merdidian Hospital, but is still suffering from shock.

Woman Claims Self Defense in Fatal Stabbing

Stanford Watkins, 43, was fatally stabbed with a butcher knife during a fight with his common-law wife, Archie Harris, 46, in their basement apartment at 1527 6th st. nw. yesterday.

The woman told police Watkins came home drunk shortly after noon and knocked her down several times. She told police she grabbed the knife in self defense.

Watkins was stabbed once in the abdomen, police said. He was pronounced dead on the scene at 1 p. m. The woman was held for appearance at a coroner's inquest at 11:30 a. m. today at the District morgue.

'Nothing Impossible' in U. S. For Negro, Dr. Bunche Says

Nashville, Tenn., May 30 (AP).—Nothing is impossible for the Negro in America, the United Nations mediator for Palestine said today.

In an address prepared for delivery at Fisk University commencement, Dr. Ralph H. Bunche predicted that the Negro will eventually attain complete equality in America.

"We Negroes," he said, "must be great realists. The road over which we must travel is clear, though the prospect may not be pleasant. We suffer crippling disadvantages because of our origin. But we are Americans, in a basically democratic American society.

"While nothing is easy for the Negro in America, neither is anything impossible. The barriers of race are formidable, but they can be surmounted. Indeed, the entire history of the Negro in this country has been a history of continuous, relentless progress over these barriers.

"Like 'Old Man River,' the Negro keeps 'movin' along,' and if I know my people, the Negro will keep moving resolutely along until his goal of complete and unequivocal equality is attained."

The speaker further predicted that mankind will finally achieve "a world of peace * * * in which all men shall walk together as equals and with dignity."

Bunche was awarded the second honorary doctor of laws degree ever conferred by the university. The only other man so honored was Charles H. Houston, Washington attorney.

Violent Bolivian Strikes Spreading

La Paz, Bolivia, May 30 (U.P.)—Labor unrest which the government calls revolutionary was reported spreading today and advices said mines were being closed all over the country as a precaution against violence.

Railroad workers struck in the key Cochabamba area, 130 miles southeast of La Paz. Miners walked out in the Aramayo, Huanuni and other areas south of the capital.

Advices from the Catavi tin-mining center gave details of the outbreak Saturday of the workers at the Patino mines, 12,000 to 15,000 feet up in the Andes.

At least two American and four Bolivian mine officials were beaten, kicked and shot to death. It was asserted that the bodies of the Bolivians were hacked into quarters.

Four American mining engineers, and other foreigners, were kicked and beaten.

With them in the hospital at Catavi in serious condition is the Mexican-born wife of T. J. H. O'Connor, South Pasadena, Calif., chief engineer of the Twentieth Century (Siglo) Mine. A Government communique said she was tortured. Other advices said she was beaten and repeatedly raped after her husband had been killed before her.

The second American killed was Albert Krefting, Seattle, Wash.

The wounded are Wilbur J. Cook, Reno, Nev., mine superintendent; Patrick Greene, sectional manager, and Joseph G. Bessette, chief electrician.

Except for the wounded, and Mrs. O'Connor, Americans have been evacuated to Oruro, capital of Oruro Province.

At the Aramayo mines, American Manager Charles G. Bowers concentrated all his American engineers near the mine and evacuated their families to La Paz.

Czech Claims U. S. Fraud in Lidice Fund

Prague, Czechoslovakia, May 30 (AP).—A Czechoslovak official charged today that five million dollars had been raised in the United States to help rebuild Lidice but "not one dollar has been applied to the cause it was meant for."

The Czechoslovak Press Bureau said the statement was made by Jan Vodicka, secretary general of the Union of Fighters for Freedom.

It quoted him as saying the collection was made among "our compatriots in the United States and the rest of the American public and the union has information that of the five million dollars, 30 per cent was taken by the collectors and nearly 70 per cent by the administration."

He said President Roosevelt was at the head of the committee formed for the reconstruction of Lidice and President Truman succeeded him.

Lidice was the village near Prague razed by the Germans in retribution for the assassination of the German "hangman" Reinhardt Heydrich.

Vodicka said Czechoslovakia would rebuild Lidice by its own efforts and from its own resources.

(In New York, Dr. Jan Papanek, resigned Czech U. N. delegate, said the Lidice Memorial Committee collected "$5000 at the maximum" from Americans, and never got a chance to apply any money to Lidice because the Czech Communist government rejected the committee's plans for building a memorial there. He said this money will be used to help Czech refugees.)

Czechs Accuse U. S. of Trade Treaty Violation

Annecy, France, May 30 (U.P.)—Czechoslovakia formally accused the United States today of violating its commercial treaty obligations by imposing export controls on shipments to Eastern Europe.

Dr. Zdenek Augenthaler, head Czech delegate, asked members of the Geneva Agreement on Tariffs and Trade to declare the U. S. guilty of violating the agreement.

Russia and eastern European countries frequently have charged the U. S. with trade discrimination, but this was the first time a formal complaint has been filed.

Augenthaler said America has refused to send Czechoslovakia "peaceful" commodities, such as equipment to produce dried milk.

East Zone Reds Ratify 'German Constitution' And Name Gerhart Eisler to Ruling Council

Berlin, May 30 (AP).—The People's Congress ratified a Soviet-style constitution for all Germany today and chose Communist fugitive Gerhart Eisler as a member of the government.

The 2000 delegates chose a 22-man delegation to the Paris conference. It will support Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky in the Paris talks, though Communist speakers admitted it was doubtful if the Big Four would recognize the delegates.

Ratification of the constitution, like all other actions by the hand-picked Congress, was by a show of hands and without debate. Only one delegate, a man from Goettingen in the British zone, refused to vote for ratification.

[The New York Herald Tribune said the dissenter was a weary little man who explained that he was a German pacifist and would approve no constitution which does not deny the right to bear arms. He did not give his name.]

Tired out by two days of pro-Soviet oratory, only two-thirds of the delegates were present in the East Berlin Opera House.

For nearly an hour beforehand, Otto Grotewohl, East Germany's No. 2 Communist, denounced the western-sponsored Bonn constitution which he called "one of the most deplorable chapters in German history." He said it was "tearing Germany apart."

He admitted the eastern constitution, which Communists and their Russian advisers drafted in close consultation, lacked some guarantees of freedom.

"But we need a democracy able to deal with its enemies," he said. "Public opinion will be free, but not so free as under the Weimar Republic which granted unrestrained freedom to criminal political elements (Nazis)."

Obviously hinting that Vishinsky may demand that the eastern constitution be adopted by the Big Four at Paris for all Germany, Grotewohl said, "I do not know why this constitution could not be the basis for an understanding with the west."

The People's Congress was chosen two weeks ago in an election in the eastern zone at which about a third of the voters cast "no" ballots. About a fourth of the delegates had been named by Communist organizations in western Germany to give color to its claim to represent all Germany.

The Eastern constitution perpetuates the socialization of industry and land which has been enforced in the Soviet zone since the war.

It has loosely worded provisions for freedom of speech and assembly but does not mention freedom of the press except to prohibit "censorship."

It authorized Communist front organizations in labor and cultural affairs to put up candidates for a national people's assembly along with political parties. Any organization with 40 seats in the assembly is obliged to participate in the government of the "German Democratic Republic."

A second parliamentary chamber, which is virtually powerless, is to represent State parliaments.

The constitutional age limit for assemblymen is set at 21, for voters at 19.

Eisler, who has been called No. 1 Communist agent in America, was one of 400 chosen from a single list of candidates to a people's council which will act as a shadow government. Eisler who jumped bail in the United States and stowed away on the Polish liner Batory, escaped extradition in England after he was taken off the ship by British police. The 52-year-old Communist is free and has been given a travel permit by the British to enable him to return to Germany. He was listed as a professor from Leipzig University where he is scheduled to take a teaching job.

Arnold Zweig, author of several Pacific novels, also was chosen for the council, the large majority of which is composed of officials of Communist front organizations.

The delegation to Paris also was chosen from a single, hand-picked list of candidates. Max Reimann, west German Communist leader, was chosen apparently as a propaganda gesture. He was arrested yesterday on British order to complete a three-month jail term for an anti-Allied speech on the Ruhr. He was a Communist member of the assembly which wrote the Bonn constitution. He refused to sign it.

With Russian officers looking on the congress indorsed a manifesto calling upon Germans to support Four-Power control of Germany's "peaceful economic and political development"—a Vishinsky proposal.

The manifesto also invited old members of Hitler's Nazi party to "cooperate" in a national front.

Compromise Indicated in Berlin Strike

Berlin, May 30 (AP).—An official American source expressed hope tonight that Berlin's 10-day railway strike may end this week.

He said leaders of the 12,000 anti-Communist strikers against the Russian-run railway administration probably would compromise on their principal demand: full payment in West marks.

The Western Allied Kommandatura announced after a meeting today that talks between the railway administration and the strikers "seem to be taking shape."

Rails were clogged by more than 40 freight trains waiting to come into Berlin.

With truck and barge traffic bringing in only a fraction of supply, the major burden remained with the American-British airlift.

The opening of Russian summer military maneuvers today was a potential danger to planes traversing the Buckeberg-Berlin air corridor, but no airlift pilots reported seeing any Russian air activity today.

The American-licensed newspaper Tagesspiegel said the tieup had virtually halted outward bound movements of reparations trains to the Soviet Union and as a result the Russians had reacted "angrily" against their German railway management.

The newspaper said 467 Russian zone freight trains were stalled.

Neo-Nazi Party Wins In Municipal Election

Wolfsburg, Germany, May 30 (U.P.).—The German Party, a neo-Nazi movement, scored a victory here last night by gaining 12,619 votes in municipal elections against 7800 Social Democrat and 4009 Christian Democrat votes.

The German Party was substituted for the German Rightist Party which was banned April 13 by the British for nationalist and militaristic tendencies.

More than 30 ballots carried inscriptions like "Give us back our Fuerher Adolf Hitler."

Unproved Weapons Target of Halsey

Fleet Admiral William F. Halsey yesterday cautioned the Nation against pinning its defense on "unproved weapons" and declared the aircraft carrier is "the most potential preserver of peace in our bag of tricks."

Halsey spoke at the floral anchor ceremony of the Fleet Reserve Association at the Watergate here. He did not mention directly the Defense Department's recent order halting work on the Navy's proposed super-carrier.

But the retired "bull" of the Pacific sea war roared into the controversy over the Air Force's high-flying B-36 long range bomber.

Halsey declared he has seen Navy fighters zoom from a carrier deck in "a matter of minutes" to the 40,000-foot altitude at which the B-36 operates. He said he was "amazed" at claims the bomber is "invulnerable to fighter interception.

"There is no cheap and easy way to win wars, and we cannot place too much reliance upon unproved weapons," he told the Fleet Reserve Association.

"Your Navy, your Army, and your Air Force will all be necessary.

"We must protect our time-tested weapons against the over-zealous utterances of the so-called experts."

Halsey said he was "anxiously awaiting" a suggested test between the B-36 and the Navy's carrier-based jets proposed by the House Armed Services Committee. Aim of the mock battle is to settle the debate whether the big bomber makes it less necessary to support a strong naval force of naval carriers.

Halsey described the carrier as "the spearhead, the cutting edge, of modern naval power, particularly as it was developed by the United States Navy."

"The Air Force has acquired a gradually increasing importance in our national defense," he went on, "and the importance is readily acknowledged by both the Army and the Navy.

"But the Air Force has by no means superseded those older services nor rendered them unnecessary."

Halsey recited the services of carriers in the Pacific war. Their planes did the reconnaissance that made it possible to seize bases, he said; softened the enemy defenses; gave the air cover to ground forces as they landed and fought inland.

"Only after the base had been seized, after airfields had been built, and after shore-based aircraft had been flown in, only then did the Navy turn over the command to the Army and move forward to seize another base closer to Japan," he declared.

"The "first and parmount" usefulness of the carrier is to preserve the peace, the admiral said. He added:

"The very fact of its mobility—its ability to move on any portion of the earth's surface that is water . . . its potential threat to any transgressor of the peace, makes it a most potential, and in my opinion the most potential preserver of peace in our bag of tricks.

"And in the unfortunate, the horrible event that war will ensue, it can be a freely moving base, fairly easily protected, from which bombing attacks with all types of bombs may be delivered.

Paris Plan

West to Ask Russians for Berlin Entry

Paris, May 30 (NYHT). — The Western Allies will ask the Russians for free access along all major highways, rail and surface routes from the west to Berlin as part of the limited agreement on Germany they hope to achieve at the Paris conference, Allied sources said today.

The Western Allies believe they have a strong card in bargaining for increase of road and rail routes to Berlin. This is Russia's desire to obtain industrial products of western Germany.

Other Allied targets include extension to Soviet-occupied Berlin of the recent three-power agreement granting additional self-government to West Berlin; dissolution of the Soviet puppet magistrat; free elections, and end of the veto.

The three powers will press for a series of clear trade agreements governing the exchange of goods between West Germany and the east, and assuring the supply of Berlin.

The Western Allies, it is reported, would favor leaving the details of trade agreements to be worked out largely by the Germans.

Mrs. Patton Asks Force to Keep Peace

Fort Knox, Ky., May 30 (AP).—The Armored Force dedicated a museum of World War II armored equipment here today in memory of Gen. George S. Patton, jr.—and his widow stole the show from the brass hats.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, until recently American Military Governor in Germany, gave an address which lived up to his introduction as a "soldier-stateman." But Mrs. Patton's remarks drew thunderous applause.

The world has known only two great ages of peace—the "Pax Romana," maintained by Rome, and the "Pax Brittancia," upheld for years by Britain, said Mrs. Patton. If peace comes again, she went on, it must be our doing, and it will be maintained by force. It will be known in history as the "Pax Americana."

The widow of the great leader of armored forces scoffed at the idea that heavy armaments mean warlike ambitions. "In 1945," she said, "we had the mightiest Army in the world. Today our token soldiers are drilling with token equipment, because wishful thinkers of America would rather vote for a new sidewalk on Main Street than for equipment which soldiers they never see may never use.

"Yet we are the most insurance-minded nation in the world. This is plain insurance against another war."

General Clay called the dedication of a memorial to Patton a fitting event for Memorial Day. "In honoring him, we honor all those who fought and died for their country," Clay declared.

"Too much has been said about Patton as a man of war," the speaker said. His dramatic personality emphasized this side of his character, Clay said, but "General Patton loved peace."

"When the war ended, he was distressed at the rapid dissolution of our armed might and openly opposed it. Thus he was called a warmonger. But he saw troubled world after victory and sincerely believed that American had to be strong to insure peace. This was not the view of a man who wanted war, but of a man who wanted peace."

government for Germany, but Vishinsky would not play.

Acheson professed to be baffled by Soviet reasoning that Germans preferred the Soviet program to the freedoms implicit in the Bonn constitution. If any German aspired to the system suggested by Vishinsky, he said, the fact had escaped him. He also sought to start discussion of reparations and Soviet ownership of German plants, but without success.

Bevin said he was disappointed that the Western program had not been examined clause by clause so that the Russians could see precisely what was intended. Vishinsky was equally disappointed last week when no one questioned him about his plan.

Soviet Accused Of Using Girls To Tempt Slavs

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, May 30 (AP). The newspaper Borba charged today that Russia tried to create an anti-Tito clique of Yugoslav officers in the Soviet Union by offering many inducements, includnig pretty girls and high-ranking jobs.

The government mouthpiece said Russia tried to set up the clique to lead a revolution against Marshal Tito, and began her activities the day the Cominform denounced the Yugoslav regime as nationalistic and Trotskyite.

The newspaper devoted a page to listing names and the inducements in each case. The campaign was conducted among the large number of Yugoslav officers who were in Russia studying Soviet military technique when the break with the Cominform came.

Borba declared the campaign failed in all except the case of a "handful of traitors and demoralized characters."

(A simultaneous attack was made on Yugoslavia Monday by D. G. Shepilov, chief of the propaganda administration of the Soviet Union's Communist Party. He wrote in Pravda that Marshal Tito is "pushing his country onto a fatal path."

(The article was a review of the tenth volume of Prime Minister Josef Stalin's collected work.")

Gen. Clark Returns to Anzio, Stresses U. S. Interest in Italy

Anzio, Italy, May 30 (U.P.).—Gen. Mark Clark returned to the Anzio beachhead today to speak before the graves of 11,000 American soldiers who fell in Italy.

He said that in each grave there was a bit of the heart of America—not an imperialist America but an America devoted to the cause of peace.

Clark said the United States "continues its interests in the preservation of a free and independent Italy.' He said if Italian freedom and independence were threatened America would consider appropriate measures.

Randolfo Pacciardi, Italian Minister of Defense, said the Italian government wanted to "give testimony of its undying gratitude to the Government, the people and the armed forces of the United States."

The speeches were followed by the sounding of taps and the laying of a wreath by United States Ambassador to Italy James C. Dunn.

Moscow Issues New Call for Greek Talks

Moscow, May 30 (AP).—Soviet readiness to discuss further the question of settling the Greek civil war was emphasized in a Pravda editorial today which restated Russia's conditions.

The Communist Party organ declared "the Greek problem can and must be solved."

It complained that Britain and the United States had not given a direct yes or no answer to "concrete Soviet proposals."

Western diplomatic observers said they believed the Pravda statement was as significant as the original statement of Tass, official Soviet news agency.

(Three takes of this Moscow dispatch were not received in New York.)

Tass said on May 20 that Dean Rusk, U. S. Assistant Secretary of State, and Hector McNeil, British Minister of State, proposed unofficial discussion of the Greek strife. They met with Andrei Gromyko, Soviet deputy foreign minister at the United Nations, on April 26 and Gromyko made proposals for three-power action.

These proposals included new Greek elections in which the Communist guerillas would participate, and the ending of all foreign (American) military aid.

They also included declaration of an amnesty, and three-power supervision of the elections and of Greece's borders, in which Russia would take part.

Pravda repeated these proposals and said the British and American answers published the same day "try almost to deny even the fact that there had been talks between the representatives of the three powers as well as the Anglo-American initiative in them."

Instead of answering the Soviet propositions, Pravda said, the British and Americans had taken the "inconsistent and contradictory line" that they were ready to discuss the question in the United Nations with the participation of the Greek government.

The editorial said the Greek question could not be solved by "diplomatic maneuvers which are calculated to distract attention from the basic questions."

Pravda said the British and American governments preferred the "status quo" position in Greece, but "the Greek status quo is bloody civil war.

(In its answer May 20, the United States said if Russia wants peace in Greece she should influence her Communist satellites to stop backing the guerillas. Both Britain and the United States cited the mediation machinery and border supervision machinery set up by the United Nations with which Russia and her satellites have refused to cooperate. They said they did not intend to deal behind the back of the Greek government.)

Employes Receive Back Pay Boosts

New York, May 30 (U.P.).—Arbitrator Edward Weinfeld today granted retroactive pay increases to employes of the city's three major private bus lines.

The employes, members of the CIO Transport Workers Union, had won 24-cent-an-hour pay hikes last May and demanded that the increase be retroactive to the date of expiration of their previous contracts. Weinfeld was appointed by Mayor William O'Dwyer to arbitrate the dispute.

Weinfeld granted employes of the New York City Omnibus Corp. a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase for the three-month period prior to May 1, 1948.

Mrs. Adriana Eugenie Nicholson Woods, 90, died Saturday at her home.

Her husband, Allan L. G. Woods, 28, said "Mommy had been ill for years but it was pneumonia that finally took her away—she was a great woman, a great woman."

Calls Policy 'Odd'

British Aid Reds, China, Official Says

By A. T. Steele

Canton, China, May 30 (NYHT). Dr. George K. C. Yeh, Nationalist China's acting Foreign Minister, today pointed a finger of sarcasm at British policy in Hongkong.

Dr. Yeh described Hongkong as "the principal supply base for Communist areas in the Far East."

He drew attention to the "oddity" which enables the British to carry on armed suppression of Communists in Malaya and on the other to permit use of Hongkong as a major Communist supply base. Admitting that it is not part of British policy to "purposely appease" communism, the acting Foreign minister expressed bewilderment.

A cabinet crisis appeared to be developing rapidly within the ranks of Nationalist China's drifting government. A cabinet minister said the entire cabinet of Premier Ho Ying-Chin, including the Premier himself, has indicated the intention of quitting, although a formal resignation has not yet been submitted.

Powers Weigh Reds' Threat In Far East

London, May 30 (U.P.). — Eight nations with interests in the Far East threatened by Communists are holding informal exploratory consultations on economic and political policies, it was reported today.

Nations participating are the United States, Britain, France, the Netherlands, Belgium, India, New Zealand and Australia.

Informed sources said the main emphasis of the consultations is on need for concerted action in the economic field, and that Britain is taking the initiative as an opponent of the "wait and see" attitude toward the spread of communism in Asia.

Britain was described as wanting "positive and concerted action by Western powers if the whole of the Far East is not to be engulfed."

The informal consultations were said to be in London, Washington, Paris and Nanking. Although the question of recognizing a Communist China has not yet arisen, the new China regime was included in discussions on the policy of economic reconstruction for Asia as a whole.

Barter Pact Forecast

Buenos Aires, Argentina, May 30 (U.P.).—Reliable sources said tonight that Argentina and Britain will announce on Tuesday the conclusion of a five-year $2,250,000,000 barter agreement.

U. S. Prepares To Trade With Chinese Reds

Associated Press Reporter

The Administration is slowly swinging around to a policy of doing business with a Communist China.

A policy of restricted trade like that which governs American economic relations with Communist eastern Europe is being worked out by the State Department to cover dealings with the Chinese.

This is based on two major restrictions:

1. No loans. What the Chinese buy from the United States they will have to pay for in cash or goods. No American aid supplies go to Communist areas.

2. No strategic materials. Goods which are now barred from trade with Russia and its European satellites because they might have military value are not to be sold to Communist China either.

Recognition Likely Eventually

Along with a trade policy built on these lines, the State Department is intensively studying the Chinese situation and its impact on general American foreign policy toward the Far East.

Officials believe it only a question of time until the Communists take over the whole huge territory of China. At some future point, perhaps several months off but possibly soon, the Communists are expected to proclaim formation of a new Chinese government.

This will raise the question of American recognition, and while no final decision has been made all indications are that this Government eventually will recognize the new regime and establish diplomatic relations with it. Already American diplomats are in contact with local Communist authorities in key cities like Tientsin, Peiping and Nanking.

Concerted Action Expected

Action along this line is expected to be taken in concert with other non-Communist countries, such as Britain and France, with which the United States is already discussing the formation of a solid non-Communist front—in Asia as in Europe.

At the same time, and again drawing a parallel with eastern Europe, American officials intend to take the line that this Nation's real friendship is for the Chinese people and not their Communist rulers.

The issues of personal freedom, civil rights and others long contested on the European front of the cold war are expected to be raised afresh in the new phase of the struggle between the Western powers and Soviet-controlled communism in the Far East.

Moreover non-Communist elements probably can count on support from the United States, Britain and other Western countries although it remains to be seen whether this will take any practical form.

Sawyer Hints Reds May Get Chance to Buy More in U. S.

Toronto, May 30 (AP).—A United States Cabinet officer gave Russia and her satellites a broad hint today they can get a chance to buy more of the American goods they want—by changing their ways.

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer said "no rigid formula" governs the 15-month-old policy of denying United States industrial goods as well as outright military materials to the Soviet bloc, and "the procedure is still flexible."

Admitting frankly that "we are utilizing export control to implement foreign policy," Sawyer added:

"It is clear that so far as possible we should, and we wish to, permit the free flow of trade between all parts of Europe and the United States.

"If improvement in the relations between eastern and western Europe takes place, we can look for a larger volume of trade to the benefit of both the East and the West."

This clew on how the Soviet can win an easing of the currently tight "ban" against her buying here—the first indication that the United States would let up, on condition—was tossed out while foreign affairs chiefs tested the temperature of the cold war at a meeting in Paris.

Sawyer inserted it in a speech prepared for the opening of the second Canadian International Trade Fair. The speech dealt largely with U. S. support of efforts to bring about an expansion of world trade, largely through removal of trade restrictions.

The U. S. Government, through the Commerce Department, also is seeking to encourage greater imports so that other countries can earn more dollars to cover their purchases, he said.

Sawyer observed that trade between the United States and Canada, "relatively free of controls," has over a period of years become "the largest exchange of goods between any two countries in the world today," with a volume close to $3,500,000,000.

Canadian-U. S. trade, he commented, "has not been developed by intentional planning—it has grown naturally because each country can buy the goods it needs from the other at the lowest cost."

Success Seen By Sponsor Of Alien Bill

Representative Hobbs (D., Ala.) predicted yesterday his bill to jail deportable aliens like Gerhart Eisler (before he got away) will come sailing out of the House Judiciary Committee this week.

"It's a crackerjack bill," he said. "That Eisley case ought to push it right through the House and Senate.

"It just means that we will reclaim our independence and sovereignty."

Hobbs explained to reporters that he believes a Government that lacks full deportation powers also lacks independence and sovereignty.

Would Permit Jailing

"This country," he said, "can't exercise full deportation powers as long as Russia or any other country won't grant travel orders or passports to deportable aliens.

"Why should the Russians? These aliens are too valuable to them here as agents."

But he said his bill would make it possible to keep such agents from running loose in the country. It would empower the Attorney General to toss them in jail until they could be deported.

Eisler slipped out of the country May 6 on the Polish liner Batory. He was out on bail while under sentences for contempt of Congress and making false statements to immigration authorities.

'More Like Eisler'

"There are a lot more like Eisler in this country," Hobbs said.

"There are Communists and subversives and criminals of every type. There are from 3000 to 5000 of them, compared with 360 when I first tried to get a bill passed in 1936."

With the possibility of a stay in prison hanging over them, Hobbs said, a lot more people might get passports or might leave the country voluntarily.

He said he expects the Judiciary Committee to approve his bill today or Thursday.

Attorney General Clark urged in a letter last week that Congress get busy on the bill. In the same letter, he said the Justice Department is investigating, or has started action against, 833 suspected subversive aliens.

Smyth Is Sworn In As Commission Member

Princeton, N. J., May 30 (AP).—Prof. Henry D. Smyth, head of the Princeton University physics department, took the oath of office today as a member of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Smyth, 50, author of the War Department's Report on Atomic Energy for Military Purposes, will serve on the commission until June 30, 1950, filling the vacancy created by the resignation of Dr. Robert B. Bacher. Smyth will be on leave of absence from Princeton.

Hickenlooper Uses Calculated Fear Tactics, Lilienthal Says

Europe in the integrity of the principal security enterprise of this country."

Hickenlooper, Lilienthal said, used "words calculated to arouse fear and distrust and a feeling of approaching collapse.

"There is no justification for such a vague, un-American blanket charge."

Criticism of the program, he said, could be either 1, constructive, responsible and sober, or 2, criticism by "scares and frights."

"If the latter (type of criticism) is justified," he said, "I just want to say that, in a very short time, this enterprise, in whatever hands it will be, will be dealt a death blow.

"Neither this group of men or any other group of men can carry on vital and secret enterprises if the criticism of it is launched in terms and in phrases calculated to (bring) unnecessary suspense, fear, fright and ultimately panic."

Lilienthal sat in his office at a long, wooden table stacked with "top secret" documents—all of which he said had been made available in the past to Hickenlooper and committee members.

Promises Own "Evidence"

At no time since he took office in 1947 until last Sunday had the Senator expressed disapproval of his general conduct in office, Lilienthal said. Hickenlooper, he added, has rendered a "verdict" although "an indictment and the evidence still is to come."

He said he will present this "evidence" of accomplishments to the congressional committee in open session beginning Wednesday. Predicting "many weeks" of hearings, Lilienthal said in advance that he would reject arguments that the atomic program was "so secret" no accounting could be given in public.

And, he said, if such charges "can be made in public but not responded to in public," it would be a "travisty on the American sense of fair play."

Lilienthal said Hickenlooper's charges were a "wholesale aspersion" on 60,000 persons employed in the atomic program.

If the end result of a congressional investigation proves to be mere "differences of opinion" between himself and Hickenlooper, it would mean that "the Atomic Energy Commission is being played with like a political football."

Lilienthal said he has noted an effect on morale of atomic workers over the past 10 days. In a veiled hint that resignations—including his own—might be expected if "unjustified" criticism continues, Lilienthal said:

"If this is the price one pays, men with alternatives certainly will think of them. . . . If this turns out to be simply a matter of opinions, many will feel that intolerable conditions have been created for scientific and technical people."

Going into the background of civilian control of the atomic establishment, authorized in 1946, Lilienthal said the five commissioners found:

1. The atomic weapon situation "tragic and dangerous to this country."

2. Production threatened.

3. Raw materials shaky and uncertain.

4. "Morale was shot."

5. The security once maintained by the Manhattan District—term used for the enterprise when it was under Army control—was in "remnants."

Lilienthal said he did not mean this in criticism of the Army or the Manhattan District because during the period of August, 1945, to December, 1946, the whole program has been left in a state of "suspended animation."

What, he asked the newsmen, was the Commission to do? He said it could have been become concerned in all the details, or it could do what it did.

"We realized," he said, "that the thing to do was to get weapons rolling. That was the best thing for security . . . "

He said now that the weapons program is on "firm ground," it will be easier to make other necessary changes.

Lilienthal charged that Hickenlooper, although fully acquainted with such top secrets as "the design of new weapons," never brought sweeping charges of incompetence or "mismanagement" before. He admitted, however, that the Senator had criticized detailed phases of the program.

Defines Security

"He knows what an enormous advantage the country will enjoy" with development of new weapons and plants, "and now the whole program has been thrown under suspicion," Lilienthal said.

Lilienthal gave as his description of "atomic security," the process of "making the country stronger." Pleading for an opportunity to state his case publicly, the chairman said security involved a great deal more than "just gates, padlocks, devices around this building and in this room."

He said "the people want to know about security in the sense of how strong are we? . . . The end result is the people's business."

Earlier in the day the Federation of American Scientists said it "welcomed" the investigation of the atomic program "provided it is a full investigation openly conducted."

It said the disappearance of the atomic materials from the commission's Chicago laboratory "represents a careless slip on the part of someone in the laboratory" and discounted theories that espionage may have been involved.

"When chemists handle bottles by the score for years it will sometimes occur that one such bottle is midlaid," the federation said. "Human error is inescapable."

The federation statement, issued by Dr. Hugh C. Wolfe, chairman, on behalf of the administrative committee, pointed out that the accounting system of the AEC was "adequate to catch the loss" and said salvage was carried out so successfully that "all but a teaspoonful" of the missing uranium has been recovered.

The statement defended the AEC in its policy of sending radioisotopes abroad, saying that "no competent scientist would suggest that these materials have any connection with the manufacture of atom weapons," and adding that "to place an embargo on basic science, on the tools and materials of research, is unworthy of the dignity of a great nation."

Regarding the congressional furor over the granting of atomic scholarships to Communists, it conceded that students working in restricted fields should be cleared for loyalty. But it said it saw no need for such clearance for students in nonsecret fields.

Senate Home Rule Action Near

center of world democracy. It is the Capital of the democratic world. The free people of the world now look to the United States and to Washington, its Capital City, for moral as well as material support in these trying times.

"This City of Washington—the District of Columbia—has now a population of almost one million inhabitants. The population of the District of Columbia is approximately as great as the combined populations of Nevada, Wyoming and Montana. The state of literacy is the highest of any place in the United States, the people of the District of Columbia have a broad cultural background, and yet, so far as citizenship is concerned, they exist in a twilight zone.

"We are constantly talking about the right of free peoples to have a say in their own affairs, and yet, insofar as I know, this is the only great city in the democratic world where people do not have suffrage."

Senator Holland:

"Mr. President, this bill involves a highly important question of essential civil rights applicable not only to the approximately 900,000 citizens of the District of Columbia, but applicable to many other persons who will come here in the future and remain for a season and make themselves, to all intents and purposes, a part of this community.

Denied Citizen Rights

"Here they find themselves denied the advantages given to citizens in every other American city and community in our Nation namely, the right of home rule, the right of determining by their own votes who shall serve as the members of their municipal executive body, and as the members of their own executive school body, and who, in short, shall be, to them, representatives of a Government which is their Government, and who will be answerable and responsive to them and their wishes, just as those who reside in other communities of the Nation expect their locally elected municipal and school officials to be responsive and answerable to the will of the citizens of those various communities, embracing every community in the Nation, except the District of Columbia, in which there reside approximately 900,000 American citizens."

Comment by Taft

Senator Robert H. Taft (R., Ohio):

"Here is a city in which Americans are born and grow up without any right of home rule whatsoever, without any right to participate in the Government which controls their daily affairs and has to do with their daily lives. I myself believe that local self-government is almost as important to liberty as is national government.

"I do not believe we can have real freedom in this country without local self-government and the right of people to determine the matters which affect them in their daily lives, such as the administration of their schools, the condition of their streets, their various public services and other things in which every community has a vital interest."

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.):

"Having served for many years as a member of the District of Columbia Appropriations subcommittee, I have had many personal experiences with respect to the sad deficiencies which arise from the fact that the people of the District do not have the power to exercise self-governing authority over the normal housekeeping activities of city government. I feel that under the provisions of this bill they will have the opportunity to exercise such authority in a manner which will redound to the benefit of the community, the Capital of the Nation."

Veterans Warned Congress Cuts Aid

Roanoke, Va., May 30 (AP).—Leroy S. Bendheim of Alexandria, commander of the Virginia Department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, today attacked congressional economy moves directed at veterans' benefits.

Bendheim charged Congress with voting indirectly to curtail such benefits by ordering several thousand Veterans' Administration employes cut from Federal rolls.

(A House appropriation cut half a million dollars from a presidential budget request for more than 5½ billions for veterans' affairs. The cut looped 28 million dollars from administrative expenses, leaving 800 million dollars for that purpose. The VA ordered 8000 workers dropped on May 6.)

Bendheim spoke to VFW members attending the opening session of the Virginia VFW convention:

"We must safeguard what I consider the beginning of an economy act designed to cut from under the veteran all the benefits in acts passed by Congress, including the GI Bill," the commander said.

He warned veterans to exercise their right of ballot to demand "justification" for any recession in benefits.

"These representatives will not vote directly to eliminate them, but by seeking to cut beyond the point of efficiency the personnel, they thereby indirectly make it impossible to administer the benefits of the legislation," the speaker declared.

Questioned afterward by a reporter, Bendheim said "I place no credence in charges of VA mismanagement and inefficiency."

3 Romanians Get 25 Years For Treason

Bucharest, Romania, May 30 (AP).—A military court today convicted three former Romanian officials—one of them a general—of high treason and sentenced them to serve up to 25 years in prison.

They were accused of betraying Romanian state secrets to Col. John R. Lovell, former military attache at the United States legation here. A fourth defendant who faced a lesser charge got five years. All have lodged appeals.

(Last November the Romanian government requested the recall of Lovell and Henry P. Leverich, counselor of the U. S. legation, on charges they had conspired with "spies and saboteurs." The United States termed the charges ridiculous and retaliated by asking Romania to recall two of its envoys to Washington. Lovell and Leverich left Bucharest on January 1.)

The three Romanians are Eugen Gheorghiu, former ministerial private secretary to the Finance Ministry; Gen. Gheorghie Rozin, former high official of the Ministry of National Defense and once acting chief of the General Staff; Alexandru Theodoreanu, a former ministerial director of the Finance Ministry.

Eskimos Quit Effort to Aid Downed Fliers

Winnipeg, Manitoba, May 30 (U.P.).—Eskimos on dog sleds today abandoned their efforts to haul gasoline to three men whose plane was forced down in the Arctic wastes during a blizzard. The heavy dog sleds could make no progress in the deep snow.

A radio message from the downed fliers to Air Force headquarters here said they were running out of food. Their single-engined Norseman plane, equipped with skis, was forced down Friday near the Arctic Circle, 200 miles north of Chesterfield Inlet.

Headquarters here said RCAF planes might be able to parachute or fly in needed gasoline when the weather improved.

The men, Veteran Bush Pilot Charles Webber and his passengers, Roy Hyorliefson and a Canadian sergeant, identified only as Newnham, messaged they were huddled together inside their plane

Trolley Crash Hurts 29

Philadelphia, May 30 (U.P.).—Two trolleys collided at a north Philadelphia intersection today, injuring 29 persons, none seriously.

Wiley Urges 2 More Years' Jobless Pay

Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) yesterday called on Congress to continue jobless pay for veterans another two years because "the greatest unemployment crisis has just begun."

He also denounced what he called "loose talk" about veterans being "loafers" and "leaners" who "simply want to receive Government checks."

"Such talk is an insult, a slur and a miserable smear on the good name of America's veterans who ask no more than a fair break," he said.

Wiley said he will introduce a bill today calling for a two-year extension of the jobless pay provision of the GI bill of rights, now due to expire July 25. It provides $20 a week up to a year for jobless veterans.

He said the termination date was originally fixed for this year because it was thought that the first four years after the war would be the most difficult for veterans.

"Those four years have passed, but the greatest unemployment crisis has only just begun," he said. "To allow the readjustment allowance to lapse after July 25, 1949, would be a sham and a farce.

Similar measures have been introduced in the House, but no committee hearings have been held.

The American Legion backs the extension, and Wiley said it was also supported by other veterans' organizations, county veterans' service officers, unions and other groups.

Study These Photos Of Lamb Chops

(They Can Help You Save Money On Meat)

Chops Trimmed These Two Different Ways Were Bought In This Area At The Same Price Per Pound In Recent Test-Purchase Survey

TIP END OF CHINE BONE STILL ON EACH CHOP

(customer must pay full per-pound price for this piece of bone . . . even though no one can eat it!)

RIB LAMB CHOP UNTRIMMED BEFORE WEIGHING

...as some markets here weigh lamb chops for pricing

DO MANY MARKETS HEREABOUTS still retail meat this old-fashioned way . . . untrimmed BEFORE weighing? Findings in recent survey by an independent research organization indicate you should CHECK YOUR MARKET! Women investigators bought chops at markets all over this area. They discovered that 94% of these markets (other than Safeway markets) DID NOT TRIM THE RIB LAMB CHOPS BEFORE WEIGHING. Some markets trimmed the chops AFTER weighing—but this after-weighing trim didn't save the customers from paying for chine bone tips and bony tail pieces. Have YOU been buying your meat this expensive way? If you can't get your market to trim BEFORE weighing, come to Safeway and get the money-savings modern meat-trimming offers you!

"TAIL" OF BONE AND EXCESS FAT STILL ON EACH CHOP

TIP END OF CHINE BONE REMOVED FROM EACH CHOP BEFORE WEIGHING

(so you don't pay for this piece of bone)

"TAIL" OF BONE AND EXCESS FAT REMOVED FROM EACH CHOP BEFORE WEIGHING

(this not only saves you money—it gives you tender-eating chops that fit better in the pan and on a platter!)

SAFEWAY TRIMMED-BEFORE-WEIGHING RIB LAMB CHOP

...trimmed so you pay for only main "meaty" part of each chop

MONEY-SAVINGS OF 21¢ TO 67¢ per typical 6-chop purchase are secured by many housewives who purchase trimmed-before-weighing meats, the test-purchase survey reveals! In just a few weeks of meat-buying such savings can go a long way to cut down the high cost of living for your family. You are rightfully entitled to GET THESE SAVINGS . . . because every market should trim meats BEFORE WEIGHING. No longer do you need to buy rib lamb chops, for example, on somebody else's say-so. The chop photos printed here show you exactly what kind of trimming to look for. Take these photos to your market. Use them to check the next rib lamb chops you buy BEFORE your chops are put on the scales!

SAFEWAY'S OFFER: We will give you at no cost DOUBLE the number of rib lamb chops you buy if ever you get from us any rib lamb chops NOT trimmed before weighing! Just show the meat to the manager of the Safeway store where you bought it. We won't quibble or argue. We want you to have extra rib lamb chops without cost if we fail to trim as we say!

Safeway believes all markets should retail meat this common-sense way—with excess bone, fat and waste-parts trimmed off before the meat is weighed. More and more good markets are doing it. Why don't you ask your market man to trim your next rib lamb chops before he weighs them?

SAFEWAY trimmed-before-weighing chops include more of the kind of meat people want when they buy chops. NOT the bony tail piece — which isn't rightly part of a chop you expect to eat and enjoy! NOT the chine bone tip—which should be cut off and thrown away.

Most every good cook and good market man knows all chops should be trimmed as Safeway does it . . . before weighing!

The savings cited here on rib lamb chops are typical of the savings you make on every cut and kind of meat that's trimmed as Safeway does it—before weighing. You save on rib roasts and steaks, on leg of lamb and other cuts — when each cut is trimmed before weighing according to its special requirements. Wherever you buy, insist on pocketing for yourself the money-savings this better trimming method brings you.

Safeway buys nothing less than the top government grades of beef . . . nothing less than the top grades of lamb, pork and veal. All Safeway meats are properly aged — brought to you at peak perfection.

Negro, 28, Lynched By Mob in Georgia

with bullet holes in the heart and neck, was found about 7 a. m., by a creek near Irwinton. It was the Nation's first lynching of 1949.

Hatcher said he went to the night club alone when he received a report Hill had stabbed another Negro.

As he was putting handcuffs on Hill in the club, in which there were about 100 others, someone grabbed his gun, the sheriff related.

"Hill tackled me and the next thing I knew he had my gun and fired at me. It looked like my days were numbered.

"I yelled for help and another Negro handed me his gun. I then turned it on Hill and marched him out to my car. I didn't stop to get my gun."

The sheriff said he wasn't hit by any bullets but that he was bruised and his shirt torn.

"I took Hill to jail and put him in my best cell," he added, "and then left to look for my gun. Someone had thrown it out a window and it took me about two hours to find it in the woods nearby.

"When I returned home, I went straight to bed without looking in on Hill. The first thing, I knew about his being killed was when I was called to identify a body this morning.

"When I first heard about it I thought of the Ku Klux Klan, but no one remembers seeing anyone hooded around town."

Hill, the sheriff said, previously had been arrested for shooting a small white boy.

Irwinton is a town of 500 in middle Georgia, about 20 miles east of Macon. It is the county seat of Wilkinson County, a sparsely settled rural area.

IF YOU DRIVE A CADILLAC, the illustration above tells a story.

Somewhere on the streets or highways you bring your car to a velvety stop to give a "lift" to a youngster whose thumb is pointed the same way you are—and you watch his face light up as he settles down beside you.

"Boy, a Cadillac!"

You know, without asking, what is going through his head. He's dreaming of the day when he himself grows up to man's estate and has a Cadillac of his own.

It is only natural, of course, that Cadillac should occupy this unique place of honor in the dreams and aspirations of American youth—for Cadillac is the only car in America whose name and crest have been reserved exclusively for cars of the very highest character. It is the only fine-car name that has meant the same—for decade after decade.

This year, the Cadillac name has a special luster—for Cadillac cars are powered by a great new V-type engine—the creative masterpiece of Cadillac's renowned engineering division. Performance is so brilliant, from every standpoint, that it simply must be experienced in order to be believed.

Why not experience it yourself? You are welcome in our showrooms at any time.

Church Told Christ Is Foe of Marxism

Montreat, N. C., May 30 (AP).—A churchman told Southern Presbyterians today to recognize that there is no peace between Christ and communism.

Dr. Vernon Broyles of Atlanta warned the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. that:

"All Europe is a battleground between God and Satan, between Christ and anti-Christ. As the battle goes in this generation, so will it go in generations to come."

Earlier, the assembly heard a surprise plea for deliverance from the "sin of schism" from the Rev. Harrison Ray Anderson, representing the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. (Northern). He argued a reunited Nation should mean a reunited church.

As yet the assembly as a whole has accomplished little of its scheduled business, outside of the reorganization plan.

7 Auto Speedway Workers Arrested Under Blue Law

Hagerstown, Md., May 30 (AP).—The number of persons charged with violating the Washington County blue law stood at ten today as Judge Joseph D. Mish prepared to order a grand jury study of the ancient statute.

Seven employes of a nearby auto speedway were arrested yesterday by Sheriff Joseph D. Baker in his drive to enforce the 225-year-old ban on all "but necessary" work on Sunday.

After posting $7.45 collateral, the defendants—all of them ticket handlers at the track—were released for a later hearing.

The trial of three workers from an open-air drive-in movie on similar charges ended Saturday without a verdict. Judge Mish dismissed the jurors and said he would recall the May grand jury for a special session to probe the blue law question.

What Dickens Said

It is an essential part of every national character to pique itself mightily upon its faults, and to deduce tokens of its virtue or its wisdom from their very exaggeration. One great blemish in the popular mind of America, and the prolific parent of an innumerable brood of evil, is universal distrust. Yet the American citizen plumes himself upon this spirit, even when he is sufficiently dispassionate to perceive the ruin it works; and will often adduce it, in spite of his own reason, as an instance of the great sagacity and acuteness of the people, and their superior shrewdness and independence.

"You carry," says the stranger, "this jealousy and distrust into every transaction of public life. By repelling worthy men from your legislative assemblies, it has bred up a class of candidates for the suffrage, who, in their every act, disgrace your institutions and your people's choice. It has rendered you so fickle, and so given to change, that your inconstancy has passed into a proverb; for you no sooner set up an idol firmly than you are sure to pull it down and dash it into fragments; and this because, directly you reward a benefactor, or a public servant, you distrust him, merely because he is rewarded; and immediately apply yourselves to find out, either that you have been too bountiful in your acknowledgments, or he remiss in his deserts. Any man who attains a high place among you, from the President downward, may date his downfall from that moment; for any printed lie that any notorious villain pens, although it militate directly against the character and conduct of a life, appeals at once to your distrust, and is believed. You will strain at a gnat in the way of trustfulness and confidence, however fairly won and well deserved; but you will swallow a whole caravan of camels, if they be laden with unworthy doubts and mean suspicions. Is this well, think you, or likely to elevate the character of the governors or the governed among you?"—Charles Dickens' American Notes (1843).

Senate And Pact

The State Department is amply justified in asking Senate leaders to move the North Atlantic treaty ahead on the Senate calendar. The treaty is surely the most important piece of unfinished business on Capitol Hill. Ratification will help to give western Europe a sense of security without which a lasting recovery is impossible. It will hold up the hand of Secretary Acheson in Paris. To delay the debate until the end of the month, as some Senate leaders apparently are planning, is to invite trouble. The treaty is too momentous to be left to the mercy of the sudden filibusters, the horse-trading, the backbiting, and the general confusion which so often accompany the last weeks of a congressional session.

Even more dangerous than delaying the treaty, it seems to us, is the idea of postponing action on the military assistance program until the next session. Reporters thought they heard Senator Lucas say last week that it was not a "must" to provide military help to the treaty partners this year. If the Senator was correctly quoted, he should think again. It is true that the pact does not call for military assistance except indirectly in Article 3; it is just as true that the pact will lose much of its intended effect this year if it is ratified without its military counterpart.

At least two years, perhaps five, will be needed before western Europe can resist a major attack. The amount of American help sought in the first year is smaller than the public had expected. It would be madness for Congress to adjourn this summer without at least authorizing this modest start of a program which means as much to American as to European security. The momentary relaxing of tension abroad is no reason whatever for relaxing American efforts to put Europe on its feet and to keep Soviet power in check.

Final Report

The nineteenth and concluding report of the Hoover Commission appears most opportunely. While the winds of economy blow harder every day in the halls of Congress, the appropriation bills seem to get no slimmer. And the issue involved is not only the elimination of the fat in government expenses. It is efficiency of government. "While we recognize that efficiency in itself is no guarantee of democratic government," the commission declares, "the sobering fact remains that the highest aims and ideals of democracy can be thwarted through excessive administrative costs and through waste, disunity, apathy, irresponsibility, and other by-products of inefficient government."

This broadens the challenge. But the commission pins the responsibility for action down in specific terms: "The President should be granted continuing authority to submit reorganization plans covering all agencies of the executive branch, without exception; such plans to be presented to Congress, and to become effective unless disapproved within 60 days by concurrent resolution of both houses." Here are the three essential points we would press upon the Conference Committee: No time limit as in the Senate's bill; no pet agencies singled out for special treatment as in the House bill; no single-House veto as in the Senate bill. If Congress wants economy, efficiency, and sure lines of responsibility in the Administration, it can demonstrate the sincerity of that desire by giving the President this kind of authority.

Home Rule Issue

As the Senate begins debating the District home rule bill today, attention may well be centered upon four impelling reasons why it should be passed.

First, it will restore to more than 900,000 American citizens one of the basic elements of liberty. That aspect of the bill cannot honestly be dodged. Indeed, the greatest urgency behind this bill is the urgency of giving real citizenship to this great city of Americans who are now deprived of it. "I do not believe," Senator Taft told his colleagues in discussing the bill last Friday, "we can have real freedom in this country without local self-government and the right of the people to determine the matters which affect them in their daily lives . . ."

Second, the bill will give the Nation's Capital better government. As Senator Holland pointed out, the essential services in the District are often "unresponsive to the needs of the average citizen" because the community has no control over any of its officials. Consequently, civic spirit here is sometimes dormant. Under this bill a reawakening may be anticipated. The people of the District would elect nine councilmen to carry out their wishes as to policing, public welfare policies, the building of streets, civic institutions and so forth. Moreover, the council-city manager type of government to be provided, with the orderly division of functions into departments, would be as great an improvement over the existing system as is a modern limousine over a Model T.

Third, the bill will relieve Congress of the intolerable burden of acting as city council for the District. Most members of Congress who have watched the present system in operation are convinced that they must divest themselves of responsibility for a local task that they have neither the time nor the detailed knowledge to perform satisfactorily.

Fourth, the measure will permit Congress to redeem the pledge that the founding fathers gave more than a century and a half ago. We have often cited Madison's words in the forty-third paper of The Federalist in which he undertook to reassure the future inhabitants of the then undesignated Federal District by saying, > as a municipal legislature for local purposes, derived from their own suffrages, will, of course, be allowed them.

Congress swept away the territorial government here 75 years ago and has since failed to make good the pledge of the founding fathers. This fact alone ought to spur the present Congress into action now that a home-rule bill has at last got to the Senate floor.

Attacks upon the bill are apparently to be indirect. Senators Eastland and Johnston plan to introduce an amendment that would forbid the District council to make any change in the present racial segregation without a public referendum and approval of Congress. Obviously it would be absurd to grant home rule and at the same time hamstring the representatives of the community in dealing with one of its foremost problems. Thanks to Senator Kefauver and his committee, the bill appears to have been drawn with great care. Certainly amendments of this sort ought to be rejected as utterly inimical to the purpose of home rule.

British Problem

The sharp drop in British exports between March and April has thoroughly alarmed the British. Their export trade is slipping instead of showing the steady expansion that had been hoped for. This has the effect of retarding progress toward reducing the size of the dollar trade deficit, which amounted to one and a quarter billion dollars last year. That dollar deficit, the British realize, "remains the crucial problem." So long as it exists, Britain will remain dependent on American aid to finance essential imports from dollar areas. Hence, the importance of reducing that dependence by increasing exports to the United States, Canada and other nations prepared to pay dollars for British goods.

At home the British are open to criticism for failure to push their products in this market with the skill and enterprise characteristic of American salesmanship. Yet it is obvious that salesmanship alone will not overcome consumer resistance to the excessively high prices charged for British goods that have to compete with American products of comparable utility and quality. The remedy obviously lies in price cutting that will attract American consumers. And that in turn calls for increased efficiency on the part of British producers, and in some cases, reduced profits.

Heretofore the incentive to cut production costs and prices has been definitely weakened by a number of circumstances. Lord Brand mentioned a very important one the other day in the course of a debate in the House of Lords. He said dollar shortages have actually created "a strong protective element" in favor of British exports to countries outside the dollar area. He explained that British exchange control, as well as the fact that the British are able to provide the rest of the sterling area with only a few dollars, has forced these sterling area regions to buy from Britain and made it easier and more profitable for British exporters to sell inside the sterling area and to nondollar countries. Consequently, the difficulty of expanding dollar sales is aggravated by the reluctance of British exporters to divert trade from more lucrative nondollar market outlets.

However, even these markets are offering increasing resistance to the high prices charged by the British. Continental countries complain that the pound is overvalued, and are beginning to reduce their purchases of British goods as the pressure of shortages is relieved. The tendency is, too, to cut down sales to Britain in order to avoid accumulation of sterling balances that the sellers cannot use profitably. Thus bilateral trading—based on an exchange of goods against goods—is favored, with the result of further restricting the free movement of goods in international trade. To add to her troubles, Britain is faced by import restrictions imposed by countries that are forced to conserve their limited supplies of foreign exchange. Furthermore, some British exports are paid for by releasing sterling balances built up during the war. Such exports, of course, yield no current returns—they merely wipe out a small amount of the enormous indebtedness represented by frozen sterling balances.

Pressure for devaluation of the pound sterling as a means of stimulating exports by making them cheaper in terms of other currencies is, accordingly, becoming more intense. Devaluation superficially appears to be a comparatively painless method of bringing down export prices. Indeed, it is highly probable that the exchange value of the pound will eventually be lowered. However, immediate devaluation would create new difficulties for the British, since it would increase the cost of their dollar imports in terms of the pound. Devaluation of the pound, furthermore, would almost certainly be followed by devaluation of other nondollar currencies, leaving the British no better off, competitively speaking, in dealings with those countries than they were before.

To establish British trade on a sound basis that will encourage and sustain an expansion of exports, therefore, the nation must, as Sir Stafford Cripps says, exert itself to bring down production costs. The British have made rapid strides toward increasing their productive capacity and expanding their export trade. The next and harder step is to couple continued expansion of production with increases in productive efficiency that will provide them with the permanent market outlets which they must have in order to emancipate themselves from chronic dependence on outside aid.

Academic Freedom

Regard for the principles of academic freedom does not imply toleration of disloyal teachers or adherents of organized groups pledged to the overthrow of the American form of government. But unfortunately, in their zeal to eradicate radicals from the schools, some of the States have embarked on policies that are likely to have dangerously stifling effects on education. For instance, a dispatch published in The Washington Post last Friday states that the Florida legislature is checking on the teachers in the State university system. Questionnaires have been sent to all faculty members requiring them to state under oath that they are not Communists. They are also asked to declare whether they have ever taught or opposed any of the provisions of the race segregation laws of the State. There are a great many other questions concerning past employment and present activities that might be considered legitimate, although presumably such information would be supplied to the institution when the teacher was engaged.

The Florida probe goes to show how fatally easy it is to overstep the line between selective screening of teaching staffs to eliminate really dangerous elements and the application of irrelevant tests that would bar enlightened teachers—in this case put a black mark on the records of Americans who are opponents of racial intolerance. Even in States guiltless of attempts to inject the racial issue into a campaign for ferreting out subversive teachers, legislative efforts to suppress subversive activity by forbidding teachers to join suspect organizations and invidiously singling them out for loyalty checkups have aroused the teaching profession.

It is reported that many school leaders see in this legislative trend the forerunner of the type of "witch hunt" that took place after World War I. They rightly fear that such restrictive laws will endanger freedom of speech and action on the part of the teaching profession. It would be ironical, indeed, if a movement to save American youths from the blighting effects of anti-democratic propaganda were to result in denying them the blessings of teaching based on free expressions of opinion by free and unafraid citizens.

STORMWAKE

Your voice that is a soft sweet thunder-tide
Beats in my ear with the full ocean's roar;
I am engulfed in a swift flood and wide;
I am upcast upon a lonely shore.

Here is an end of peace, and no abiding
For any hope of the long-dreamed repose;
Here are swift wings fit for a storm's riding—
Wherefore, in the hour when the white waters rose.

I had besought the wind that it be strong
To gather the blown billows ceaselessly,
That I should bear in my heart, day long, night long,
Your voice, the uncomforted crying of the sea.

Vivisection Hearings

After sitting through the two days of hearings on the McGrath bill (S. 1703) providing pound naimals for study, I was reminded forcibly of an account in H. G. Wells' Outline of History, of the 1869 meeting of the British association at which Bishop Wilberforce attacked Thomas Huxley, biologist, then actively educating the public regarding Darwinism. The anti-vivisectionist testimony before the Senate District Committee deserves much the same reply as that returned to Wilberforce's speech begging to know of Huxley, " . . . was it through his grandfather or grandmother that he claimed his descent from a monkey?"

Huxley addressed the meeting:

"I have certainly said that a man has no reason to be ashamed for having an ape for his grandfather. If there were an ancestor whom I should feel ashamed in recalling, it would rather be a man of restless and versatile intellect who plunges into scientific questions with which he has no real acquaintance, only to obscure them by an aimless rhetoric, and distract the attention of his audience from the real point at issue by eloquent digressions and skilled appeals to prejudice."

When the chairman of the vivisection hearings asked whether there was a member of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in the crowded room, not one could be found. The chamber was packed, however, with antivivisectionists. Let's remember the distinction.

I cannot but question Dr. Blalock's advice that kind treatment is shown the laboratory dog, judging from the indifference and brutal care shown the unfortunate victims of mental institutions.

I have searched my Bible for an example of animal vivisection by the greatest Physician of all times but find none. The advertised medical cure of yesterday and today will be obsolete in six months or a year.

Little is known concerning the great forces of mind, subconscious and otherwise. But we do know that diseased states of mind are reflected on the body. Hence, it would seem that if the time devoted to dissecting dogs, in weird efforts to destroy disease, was given to the investigation of mental energy and its ramifications, infinitely greater progress might be made.

Touche

What your editorial writer said in the May 26 issue on "Secrets or Sensations" made mighty good sense to me. But how he said it shocked my purist's sensibilities. A large part of my pleasure in reading your editorials—aside from their usual level-headedness—derives from their use of good English. But perhaps I have been trained to expect too much. It gave me quite a twinge when I saw Mr. Lilienthal's assumption of guilt described as furnishing ammunition to the "vindicative" sensationalists who are out to crucify him.

I feel sure that the editorial writer knows better. I doubt if he habitually goes in for such similar adjectives as "athaletic," "preventative," or "tremendious." You don't have to use mediocre English to be a good editorial writer for The Washington Post, but evidently it helps. FREDERICK HOWELL.

Use of "Negro"

A letter writer to The Washington Post (letter published May 25) objects to the use of the word Negro. She urges the use of the word American. Very good. Negroes born in America are Americans. But aren't they Negroes racially?

What about Asiatic? European? African? Indian? Mexican? Canadian? Do Chinese, Japanese, Indians, Koreans, Hawaiians lose their racial identities through American citizenship? What about Irish? Scotch-Irish? Theodore Roosevelt was of Dutch ancestry. Should the fact have been suppressed?

This correspondent objects also to the term Negress. What about actress, seamstress and other similar terms? She herself uses approvingly the term Afro-American. What's the difference? Dago and nigger are objectionable slang words. But is there any harm in the term Italian? Or any harm in the word Negro? I can't see it.

Stilwell's Service

In a recent column of Joseph Alsop, I noted a reference to General Stilwell.

Mr. Alsop seemingly is not aware of the accomplishment of this great American general, who was relieved of his command and returned to the United States, later to die, as a direct result of the physical and mental hardship which he experienced as commanding general of the China-Burma-India theater.

General Stilwell had an almost intense hatred of the corrupt Nationalist leadership, personified by an obviously incompetent, feudal warlord, —Chiang Kai-shek. In spite of all the military and economic aid which has been given to China during the last seven years, Chiang has succeeded in losing a war against the Communists, a war which every American who served in the CBI knew was to happen—and there were among them many that knew just how this war would end, in a complete victory for the Communists.

General Stilwell was so aware of this course, and together, with the Chief of Staff, General Marshall, tried to make our Government understand the problem. Stilwell even went as far as to say nothing could be done as long as Chiang Kai-shek remained in control, a fact which we are slowly realizing. The end is almost in sight for China as a free people, so in lowering the curtain on the play, let us give credit and recognition to Gen. Joseph Stilwell, for the bravery, devotion and sacrifice which he made in serving his country as a soldier.

Dashed Hopes On Military Pay

It is with sinking heart that Army wives hear of the nonpassage of the service pay bill.

For the past few years, those of us without substantial outside means, have been grimly "hanging on" in the hope and belief that our plight would be recognized and remedied. We have washed, ironed and cleaned, painted our walls, upholstered our furniture, made our clothes, trimmed our hats—done without ad infinitum, and I for one am just plain tired—tired of knowing we can never afford a vacation, tired of knowing we can't give our grown boys a helping hand, tired of seeing my husband in old shabby clothes, tired of watching him race, morning after morning, to catch the bus for the Pentagon (so I can have our 8-year-old jalopy to drive).

We thought we had our tough years when we were young—we moved when we didn't want to move, lived in shacks where we didn't want to live, hauled our children from school to school, scrimped and saved—thinking that our early sacrifices were all "part of the game" and middle age would bring a respite of the harassing financial problems.

No man can work at his best, year after year, without a vacation—no man can work his best with the specter of financial security for his wife growing dimmer and dimmer the higher he climbs the ladder of the caste system, dipping into capital to live. No man can give his best when life is a continual struggle of scrimping and cutting corners in order to pay ordinary living expenses.

It is a short-sighted Government which allows its public servants in places of high responsibility to be continually harassed by financial worries. Does the country want to lower the standard of its military servants, or does it want the Army and Navy to become purely a "rich man's game" for men of independent means?

A BRASS WIFE.
Washington.

Officers of the armed services, who have not had a substantial pay readjustment for a great many years, obtained one small item of relief during the war years in the exemption of $1500 of their pay from income taxes. The legal authority for this small relief—a saving of $25 a month—expired last December 31.

Early in this Congress, a move was made to extend the income tax exemption, but the President advised Congress not to do this because a new pay bill to provide equitable salaries was to be enacted. Congress in its wisdom has now denied the proposed pay adjustment.

E. R.
Washington.

The May 24 letter of "Service Wife" was very enlightening to me—the wife of a Navy enlisted man. Pity the poor woman having to make-do with only $580 per month!

My husband and I are heartily in favor of the military pay bill as it is written. I believe that most of the enlisted people and their families agree that eventually it will benefit both the Government and themselves.

But let's not befog the issue with pitiful moanings that $580 is peanuts. Such statements can only serve to keep the Career Compensation Act of 1949 from being enacted into law.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Fear's Havoc

OUT OF the rubble, the destroyed cities of Europe are slowly being put together again. The long and painful task of bringing back America's war dead is nearing completion.

The physical scars of the war are being effaced. The farmers of western Europe are sowing, even in the battle areas, for a crop that may equal those of prewar years.

That is the damage we can see and feel; the losses mourned over and wept over. What few of us ever stop to think about is the hidden damage—the damage to the mind of mankind, individually and collectively. This hidden damage may well be more far reaching in its consequences, more devastating in its effect, than the damage that we can see and feel and know.

It is in the individual tragedy of a Forrestal or a Winant. It is in a thousand neuropsychiatric wards in military and veteran and private hospitals. It is in the breakdowns that come when the awful stresses and strains are finally ended.

But even that may be, like the part of the iceberg that is above the water line, only a fraction of the toll. The insecurity, the fear, the cynicism, the disillusion, the hatred, the frustration, these make the score that no statistician can compute. They are part of the unhappy atmosphere of this transition postwar period.

IN HIS great book, A Study of History, Arnold Toynbee charts the course of the civilizations that have risen and fallen in the 5000 years that man has been keeping records. Toynbee observes that when a civilization comes into sudden power and dominance over its neighbors, there are almost immediate signs of a new and beginning cycle of fairly short duration.

A kind of ossification begins to take place. Rigid controls are imposed and one sympton is the ever-increasing dominance of the military. In civilization after civilization this has been the prelude to decline and downfall; the decay of religion, the arts, science.

It does not take an alarmist to see some slight evidence that we in this country may be in danger of allowing that to happen here. Fear is the motive for imposing Government controls unthinkable before the war.

IN THE outcry over the fact that a deluded young man, who was a Communist, got a fellowship through funds of the Atomic Energy Commission, the real issue was lost sight of. With the Government checking on the political beliefs of all applicants for scholarships paid for out of tax money, the real and present danger is that Government will dominate education and research. Furthermore, the tendency would be for the lowest common denominator of politics to dominate.

The idea of giving a scholarship to a young man who is a Communist is repellent at the very time the Department of Justice is seeking to prove the Communist Party a conspiracy to overthrow the Government by force and violence. It goes against common sense, as a number of letter writers have told me.

But in order to eliminate one such mistake—1 out of 400 or 450—we concede the right of Government to apply the test of politics in an important and ever-widening area of science. The mistake was not irreparable, since the scholar would not be allowed in any field even remotely labeled secret.

In war there is the calculated risk. Millions of Americans knew what it was to take such a risk, and many never came back. In the wise use of great power and the acceptance of great responsibility in peacetime there is also the calculated risk.

Freedom itself is a calculated risk—the risk that most men will act with responsibility and maturity. When we shut the door on this calculated risk and look to Government to police men's minds and beliefs, then the great base of our free civilization will be threatened.

"House Of God"

Mr. Harry M. Walker's letter of May 9 expresses an idea detrimental to the proper attude toward things divine and the things that have to do with man's eternal welfare as provided for by Jesus Christ.

Mr. Walker declares that "the church is a creature of man and not of God." "God's book" declares that it is "the house of God." Jesus Christ promised, "I will build my church." "The church, which is His (Christ's) body," is certainly not "a creature of man." Mr. Walker and too many others have been looking at the wrong institution.

The letter states that "God's book . . . was written many years before there was any Christian church." But "God's book" teaches that Jesus Christ did not deliver all truth needed for man's salvation while He was here in person, but He promised to deliver "all truth" by the Holy Spirit to and through the apostles after He returned to Heaven. The church did not "produce" the word, but "the seed (which) is the word of God" produced the church, although it had not been fully revealed to man and none of it had been written. DENTON M. NEAL.
Evangelist, Anacostia Church of Christ.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

M. Vishinsky's Default

CONTRARY to what was expected, M. Vishinsky has not seized the initiative at Paris by offering the Warsaw Declaration. He has not come forward as the champion of German political unity, a strong central German government, a peace treaty, and a withdrawal of the troops.

LIPPMANN

Something has happened to make the Kremlin shrink from the bold line of their propaganda during the past year, which was to bid for the support of German nationalism with a view to another Rapallo—that is to say a Russian-German combination. M. Vishinsky could hardly have done more than he has to repel rather than to attract German nationalism, or indeed to stultify the German Communists.

FOR THE net result of his proposals would be to perpetuate military government and the military occupation. No one knows what caused the Kremlin to alter its line, changing so unexpectedly and so abruptly from an exceedingly attractive pro-German policy to a crudely anti-German. Is it that the Poles and the Czechs have been awakened by the world-wide discussion to a realization of where the new Rapallo policy was leading? And has the Kremlin shrunk from the line of the Warsaw Declaration, fearing to lose the Poles and the Czechs while it was wooing the Germans?

One can only speculate. But whatever the explanation, M. Vishinsky's default has proved to be the opportunity of the Western powers, enabling them to come forward as the opponents of partition and of military government and of the exclusion of Germany from the European community. Morally and politically the Western position is ever so much better than it promised to be, ever so much better indeed than many of the Western experts planned to have it be.

BUT OUR advantage, though real and important, can easily be overestimated, and if it is not successfully exploited, may be temporary. The Western world, including Germany, is almost certainly entering a period of recession in which trade is contracting and the struggle for markets is becoming severe. This will not be a favorable environment for the German state of which we are the sponsors and promoters.

For it is one thing to draft a constitution, to get it ratified, and to set up a government. It is another and much more difficult thing to enable that government to govern successfully. The critical test of whether the Western German politicians can raise the German standard of life and avert unemployment lies ahead. If they cannot meet that test, their own position will be insecure, and the Western influence in Germany will be undermined. A free Germany with democratic institutions will have to be a reasonably prosperous Germany working and trading in a prosperous world. The Weimar Republic was not able to withstand the great depression, and the Bonn Republic is confronted with far graver issues than its predecessor.

THE STORM signals of impending trouble in the world economy are now unmistakable—in Great Britain, in Belgium, in Italy, in France, in Germany, and not least of all the United States. Thanks to a great deal of hard and honest work and to good harvests, and with the stimulus provided by American aid, the recovery in production has been remarkable, as compared with what happened after the first World War, sensational.

But the very success in production is now disclosing how little has been accomplished to restore to solvency the prewar world economy or to create a new and solvent postwar economy. We are entering the second year of the Marshall Plan with problems and with conflicts, known to the responsible insiders that have not yet been explained to the general public.

THEY ARE the problems posed by the fact that in the effort to achieve solvency and monetary equilibrium, the world economy is contracting, is deflating, whereas the ravages of the war and the social discontent it produced cannot be dealt with except in an expanding economy and by a rising standard of life.

Unadvertised but momentous discussions are now taking place in London and Washington which deal in the last analysis with the fact that the European recovery program, as conceived abroad, rests on an extraordinary postulate. It is that European exports can capture half the American markets in South America and that, as the London Economist put it some months ago, the American export industry "will reconcile itself to the permanent loss of its European markets" and will "permit discrimination against itself."

That was all very well while the American inflationary boom was running. But with the onset of the American recession, it is ceasing to be practical politics in the United States.

THERE IS, therefore, no very good reason, if one looks at the developing situation, for the complacency and self-satisfaction with which some of the correspondents in Paris are describing the condition of things. The Russians are obviously in trouble, and have been made extraordinarily cautious by their trouble. But the Western position, though it is morally and politically fairly good, is in respect to the economic outlook far from brilliant.

There is little to justify the idea that the great game, apart from taking a few tricks, can be won by standing pat—that it can be won by anything less than bold and concerted measures to counteract the threat of depression with an expansion of trade and the opening up of the markets.

ica as the principal bulwark against another war.

If the dead of our wars could speak, he said, they would implore us never again to lower our guard.

"We must always be ready," he said. "Never again will we have the golden, priceless boon of time in which to get ready."

Henceforth, we must be so well prepared that every would-be attacker will fear to strike, or, if we should be involved in a war, that only defeat would be the lot of an aggressor, he declared.

"We must rededicate ourselves," he concluded "to the conquest of world peace, with freedom and justice for all."

The notes of Taps, sounded by Edward L. Masters, accompanied by the United States Marine Band, rolled softly across the green Virginia hillsides. The retirement of the colors closed the services.

"The American's Creed," by William Tyler Page, was recited by Robert F. Sutphin, department commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Joseph A. Walker, sr., read General Logan's order establishing Memorial Day.

The invocation was given by Dr. William B. Adams, department chaplain of the American Legion. The Rev. John T. Lawler, first lieutenant, USAF, of the Catholic War Veterans, delivered the benediction. Music was furnished by the Marine Band and the Air Force Band Glee Club and their soloists.

Pennington Conducts Program

The program was sponsored by the GAR Memorial Day Corp., which includes the Grand Army of the Republic, United Spanish War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion. Lee R. Pennington, president, conducted the program.

At an earlier ceremony near the Lee Mansion, the Women's Relief Corps of the GAR had commemorated the more than 2000 dead of the Civil War buried there. Maj. Jack P. Love laid a presidential wreath there.

For the President, Lieut. Comdr. Martin J. Muldrigg placed a wreath at the Spanish War Monument, where the United Spanish War Veterans and auxiliary also conducted services.

Several hundred persons attended each of two colorful floral anchor services in memory of those who died at sea in the Nation's wars.

Poppies Cast Into River

One was the ceremony of the Admiral Robert E. Peary Ship No. 427, VFW, in which a launch took an anchor of poppies from Hains Point down the Potomac River a quarter of a mile, where it was cast into the waters.

At the Watergate, after a program in which Admiral William F. Halsey was the principal speaker, a floral anchor was committed to the waters. The service was sponsored by the Fleet Reserve Association.

Representative O'Konski, (R., Wis.), attacking communism in a speech at the Soldiers' Home Cemetery, declared the American people too soon and too easily forget the sacrifices made by those being honored yesterday.

The program where he spoke, arranged by E. F. K. Schroeder of the Soldiers' Home, was preceded by a parade of 150 veterans from the Home.

Patriotic Groups Participating

Following the formal program at the Arlington Amphitheater, wreaths were laid at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier by Major Love, for the President, and by these patriotic and veterans' groups, with the VFW National Honor Guard officiating:

National GAR, GAR Memorial Day Corporation, Spanish War Veterans, VFW, American Legion national organization, National Guard of Honor and D. C. Department, Disabled American Veterans, national and District GAR Woman's Relief Corps, national and local Ladies of the GAR, national and local Daughters of Union Veterans of Civil War.

Also, national and local United Spanish War Auxiliary, national and local VFW Auxiliary, American Legion Auxiliary, Jewish War Veterans and auxiliary, Marine Corps League and auxiliary, Jewish War Veterans Auxiliary, national and local American War Mothers, national and local American Gold Star Mothers.

Also, Gold Star Wives of America, Navy Mothers, Daughters of the Union 1861-65, Eight and Forty, Forty and Eight, national and local American Veterans of World War II, Japanese American Citizens League, Ladies Auxiliary of Equality, Walter Ree Post 284, VFW, Military Order of Purple Heart, Regular Veterans Association and Y's Adventurers Club (YMCA).

Ground Crew Walks Out at Airlines Base

New York, May 30 (AP).—Some 160 Colonial Airlines ground crewmen went on strike today at La Guardia Field after failure to reach agreement on a new contract.

Branch T. Dykes, vice president in charge of operations of the airline, termed the walkout a "wildcat strike" and accused the union of violating the Railway Labor Act by not filing proper strike notice. He said the company would try to hire other mechanics, cleaning men, and baggage handlers but would be willing to rehire any of the men now on strike.

He said the strike had not interrupted operations and that four of the company's executives had been helping to load planes since 2 a. m., an hour after the strike began. Maintenance is being handled by executive maintenance chiefs, he said.

For the duration of the strike, Dykes said, maintenance work on heavy planes would be shifted to the line's Canadian base. Colonial operates flights to Bermuda, Canada, upper New York State and New England.

Frank Tauss, president of Air Transport Lodge 1165, International association of Machinists, denied that the walkout was a "wildcat" strike" and accused the company of refusing to arbitrate. He said negotiations began on April 13 and the union's contract expired on May 1.

Tauss said the union's demands include two weeks' severance pay, wage increases of 15 to 20 cents an hour, and four additional paid holidays.

Health Plan Is Voluntary

tax receipts. The payroll levies would be 3 per cent, split between worker and employer, on income up to $4800 a year.

Several other plans have been proposed. One, offered by Senator Taft (R., Ohio), stresses the use of Federal and State funds to care for low income persons.

The new Republican substitute made public yesterday would be built around local, voluntary plans something like those in which around 35,000,000 people already are enrolled—plans like those of the Blue Cross, unions, cooperatives.

But the backers say they would get away from the disadvantage of flat-rate premiums that put present plans out of the reach of millions of people.

"This legislation," they said in a statement, "contemplates hundreds of such non-profit voluntary plans, each locally organized and operated. It will use existing plans, enable them to expand, and open the way for new plans throughout the country."

Each State would have to pass a law authorizing its participation. A State health council would split the State into regions under control of local people.

The regional authorities would figure out the normal cost of a "yardstick" program covering such things as doctors' services in homes and offices, preventive medical care and hospitalization. Any plan operating in the region and providing yardstick benefits would get from the State, with Federal help, the difference between the payments by subscribers and the estimated cost.

A local plan could cover more or less than the yardstick. In that event, subscribers would pay more or less than 3 per cent of incomes up to $5000.

The State council would have to approve the maximum coverage any plan could provide. This would take into account the services that are available or that could readily be obtained. There could be revisions.

"This bill," the authors say, "links the extension of prepaid services with the local capacity to supply service."

The bill also provides for the use of Federal funds to train more doctors and nurses, and to build more hospitals and health service centers.

Senators Ives and Flanders said in a separate statement that the measure is "diametrically different from the compulsory health insurance bill offered by the Administration."

"It would place and preserve primary responsibility for the development of adequate health services in the States and local communities where the needs are most accurately known and best can be met, rather than at the remote Federal level," they said.

They added that their pattern of medical service is designed to give "the maximum in assistance, without regard to an individual's income, and with the minimum of Government direction, control and decentralization."

Case and Javits said the bill "meets the challenge to Republicans who are progressives."

Sun's Waves Get Tangled Up, Observatory Scientist Finds

By the United Press

Dr. Charles G. Abbot, retired secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, reported yesterday that the earth is warmer at some times than others because the sun's rays get tangled up.

He said research shows that the sun puts out a master heat wave every 273 months—or 23 years—but that this wave is broken down into at least 14 lesser waves which surge and ebb simultaneously.

Sometimes, he said, ebbs cancel out surges or rambunctious surges collide with each other and augment the heat the earth receives.

Abbot conducted his analysis of sunshine from the Smithsonian Observatory in the Chilean Andes. His measurements are believed to be the most accurate in the world. Any slight errors in calculating solar radiation would render them virtually useless, he said.

Abbot commented that although his studies show there are at least 14 ebbs and surges connected with sunwaves, there may be more. Large fluctuations of water levels in the Great Lakes indicate this possibility, he said.

Ford Starts Recall Of 106,000 Idled By 25-Day Strike

Detroit, May 30 (U.P.).—The Ford Motor Company began recalling its 106,000 employes back to work today following settlement of the 25-day-old walkout that had idled its 33 manufacturing and assembly plants.

The strike over an alleged speed-up of assembly lines was settled yesterday but Ford spokesman estimated it would take a week to get the big River Rouge plant back to peak production. Another week will be required to get the flow of parts to auxiliary plants back to normal.

Union Veterans to Hold Last Meeting in August

Indianapolis, May 30 (AP).—The boys who wore the blue in the Civil War will meet for the last time here August 28-September 1.

Last summer the aging veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic voted at their meeting in Grand Rapids, Mich., to make this year's national encampment the last. Indianapolis was the site of the first GAR meeting just after the war.

Lieut. Gov. John A. Watkins of Indiana is general chairman of arrangements. He expects possibly five of the few survivors of the Union armies to attend.

Senator Cordon Advises Congress to Put Balancing of Budget Up to President

By the United Press

Senator Cordon (R., Oreg.) yesterday urged Congress to confront President Truman with a flat choice between a reduction in Federal spending and possibly operating the Government in the red.

A member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, he is a leader of a group of Republican and Democratic Senators who are trying to cut spending. They believe the alternative is a tax increase or operating the Government at a deficit.

They have been defeated in several attempts to trim individual money bills for various Government agencies and now are considering proposals for a flat across-the-board reduction in spending.

Cordon said he had not made up his mind whether Congress should attach a rider to the last regular appropriations bill or pass a separate bill after the Senate has disposed of the regular money bills.

Reminded that the President might veto such legislation, the Senator said he didn't fear that very much. He said Mr. Truman would have to make his choice and then stand on it.

"Let him assume the responsibility for rejecting an honest program if he wants to," Cordon said. "That's all right with me.

"In the last analysis, this program of bringing Government spending into line with Government income is a problem that affects us all. It's much more than a political problem."

He conceded, however, that it might be a good idea to give the President some say in where the reductions would be made instead of ordering a 5 or 10 per cent across-the-board cut as some Senators have suggested.

That would permit the President to curtail less pressing Federal activities to concentrate on more urgent programs.

Senators Gurney (S. Dak.) and Vandenberg (Mich.), ranking Republican members of the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees, respectively, already have warned that foreign aid and arms spending cannot bear the brunt of the economy drive.

Income Tax Trial

Counts Case Cleared of Word 'Bribe'

Richmond, Va., May 30 (AP).—Records in the income tax evasion case of W. Clay Counts, of Roanoke, show that all references to "bribery" were stricken from the proceedings on the basis of objections by defense counsel.

Counts was acquitted by a jury in Federal District Court on Tuesday, but an Associated Press story erroneously mentioned the word "bribes," in reporting the case.

The records show only that Counts maintained he made certain "political fund" payments. He thought they went to the late Senator Glass or his agents. At the trial, however, his attorney, James E. Palmer, brought out that payments to obtain contracts for fire fighting equipment were made to an imposter and that Senator Glass was entirely innocent. Senator Glass' name was cleared by both Government and defense counsel.

Counts is president of the Liberty Fire Apparatus Co. of Roanoke.

Writ to Be Sought To Free Rutledge

Cedar Rapids, Ia., May 30 (U.P.).—Attorney R. S. Milner said today he plans to seek release from jail on a writ of habeas corpus for Dr. Robert C. Rutledge, convicted slayer of his wife's alleged seducer.

Rutledge, 28-year-old St. Louis baby doctor, was found guilty of second degree murder in the slaying of Byron C. Hattman, 29, also of St. Louis. He faces 10 years to life in prison.

The doctor, now dressed in prison garb at county jail, was reported in good spirits despite the fact that his wife, her family and his family left Cedar Rapids without visiting him after the verdict.

His wife said she wanted to see him, but respected his own wish that she never view him in jail.

She was in seclusion at the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Howard Goodrich, at Hannibal, Mo.

Jailer Jerry Hanus said Rutledge cleaned out his cell today and was eating well. The jail had no special holiday dinner scheduled, only liver and onions.

Methodists Act In Virginia on Plan For Settling DPs

Richmond, Va., May 30 (AP).—A Virginia Methodist group voted here today to organize a program for settling displaced persons in the State.

The plan visualizes the settling of families throughout all districts of the Virginia conference, which comprises all the State except the extreme southwestern counties.

It was set forth by Dr. Roland P. Riddick, of Richmond, head of the Virginia conference commission on town and country work of the Methodist Church. The executive committee of the commission met here today.

It was brought out that, with the exception of Lutheran churches, Protestant groups in America have settled only 4.2 per cent of the displaced families who have been brought in.

Fear was expressed that if homes are not found immediately, many Protestants will be stranded in Europe after the country's quota of 205,000 displaced persons is filled.

The Virginia Methodists expressed a desire to settle at least 100 families.

The commission will organize a displaced persons committee in each of the 14 districts of the church and will explore with local pastors and church groups the housing and job opportunities in each of the districts.

Girl, 2, Seriously Hurt in Fall From Upstairs Window

A 2½-year-old girl was injured seriously yesterday when she fell to the concrete sidewalk from a second floor window.

The child, Sharon Wade of 710 Jefferson st. nw., was admitted to Children's Hospital with a fractured skull. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer U. L. Wade. Her father is a streetcar operator for the Capital Transit Co.

According to police, Sharon was alone playing with her toys in the room and apparently raised the screen before toppling from the window. She was found semi-conscious on the widewalk by a neighbor, Mary Lou Long, 10, of 714 Jefferson st. nw.

Sergeant Wife Of Stricken Man Is Found

A Women's Air Force sergeant, the object of intensive search since her husband was stricken ill Sunday, last night expressed wonderment that radio had not been utilized in efforts to locate her.

Sergt. Elizabeth Farrell, five-year veteran of the WAF, arrived here last night from Charlottesville, Va., after learning there of her husband's illness on her return from a visit with friends elsewhere in Virginia.

Her husband, Harry Farrell, of Manchester, N. H., assistant enrolling clerk of the House, suffered a severe stroke Sunday and a search was initiated by Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) for Sergeant Farrell, who was believed to have been enroute from her Charlottesville recruiting post to Washington.

It was not until she returned to her station yesterday that she learned of the search, she said. She then came here immediately to join her husband at Casualty Hospital. She found him improving, she said.

Rome Report of Revolt Denied by Ethiopians

Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, May 30 (U.P.).—Ethiopian officials said today that a small-scale battle between bandits and police had been magnified out of all proportion into a "revolt" by Rome Radio.

The report that more than 300 persons were killed in a major uprising were "altogether false," government sources said.

The report of a revolt resulted from a small action in which police fought bandits who were trying to drive the cattle from an Abyssinian village, the sources said.

Void Loyalty Order, Truman Is Asked

Minneapolis, May 30 (AP).—The National Postal Workers Council, United Public Workers, CIO, has adopted a resolution asking President Truman to rescind the executive order on Federal employe loyalty.

The resolution asks that employes suspended under the order be restored to their jobs without loss of pay.

The council, meeting here over the weekend, claimed operation o the loyalty order denies Federa employes basic constitutiona rights.

The council also said discrimination in the Federal service ha not been ended. It said discrimination is widespread at the Bureau of Printing and Engraving in Washington, the Lawson Veteran Hospital in Atlanta and in the Panama Canal Zone.

Immediate passage of Senate bill 1772, the postal reclassification bill, amended to include a $650 annual pay increase for postal workers, was urged in a resolution adopted by the Council.

Other adopted resolutions call for 26 days of vacation, 15 days of sick leave, optional retirement after 25 years of service regardless of age, elimination of the substitute classification, and passage of a 30-hour week law.

One on the Aisle—

St. Louis Readies Its 'Muny' Opera

By Richard L. Coe

ALL OVAH THE MAP: St. Louis, that happy, hospitable town on the banks of the Mississippi, is readying its vast open-air Municipal Opera for its 31st summer of entertainments that are not opera . . . The "Muny" will open June 9th and stick to its familiar, successful pattern of old hits with additions their creators never imagined. . . . "The New Moon" opens the series of 11 productions and Muny patrons will probably get it much as the script was at New York's Casino 20 years ago, but for Victor Herbert's "The Fortune Teller," it would surprise no Muny regular to find interpolated comedy turns and other Herbert songs . . . All this bothers nobody, for it's spectacle that's emphasized in this huge, lovely spot. . . . Attendance record for a single Muny performance was set last summer, when 11,935 patrons saw "Rio Rita." . . . Last season's two-week finale of "Up in Central Park" drew a total of 159,770 paid admissions, another record. . . . As usual top stars will snag huge salaries for playing the leads: Opera's Dorothy Sarnoff, Annamary Dickey, Brenda Lewis, Helena Bliss, Rosemarie Brancato, Marion Bell, Sibyl Bowan, Brian Sullivan, Edward Roecker, Robert Shafer, Buster West and Sig Arno are on this summer's list. . . . Edwin McArthur leads the 50-piece orchestra, there's a chorus of 90 and Watson Barratt designs the settings under astute Paul Beisman's management . . . There's nothing quite like a Muny performance and if you're whistle-stopping that way this summer, I urge you to make a detour if necessary to enjoy its unique largesse.

DALLAS, too, announces its plans for its Starlight Operettas, summertime offering of the State Fair of Texas . . . These are, oddly enough, more modest so far as seating capacity is concerned (only 5,239 seats!), but true to Texas, transplanted Henry Senber boasts that Starlight's "more progressive" than Muny . . . By that he means that "Look, Ma, I'm Dancin'" and "Pal Joey" are programmed this summer, which also offers such Muny standbys as "Rose-Marie," "Bloomer Girl," "Show Boat" and "The Chocolate Soldier." . . . Members of the Dallas Symphony are lead by Composer Lehman Engel and last summer's "completely professional ballet of 14 dancers" will be back. . . . The stars, too, are top notch—Kenny Baker, Marion Bell, John Raitt, Nanette Fabray, Ilona Massey and Vivienne Segal . . . I haven't space to go into similar outfits in, say, Pittsburgh and Louisville, BUT—

LATEST AVAILABLE population figures for St. Louis' metropolitan area are 1,367,977; for Dallas' metropolitan area 376,548 (1940) and Washington (1946) metropolitan area, 1,255,000. . . . Could it be that the smart business men are missing a bet?

MRS. STABLER'S Ticket Mart, which has been at Lubar's, has moved across the street to Jordan's music shop, the northeast corner of 13th and G, which means that Jordan's is now where you go for out-of-town theater tickets as well as for the Olney Theater seats.

THE WILSON LINE'S steamer, Mount Vernon, sets off Wednesday night for a Hillbilly cruise down the Potomac . . . Elton Britt, a hillbilly boy of records and movies, will headline this Connie B. Gay Radio Ranch show, with Donelly James, the Don Patten Swing Boys and other ranch regulars . . . The Mount Vernon sails at 8:30 from the 7th street wharves and you get further dope from the Wilson Line, NAtional 2440.

KANSAS CITY-bound shortly is Horton Foote, codirector of Productions Incorporated, who'll hold the chair of drama for the American Writers' Conference to be held at the University of Kansas City . . . Foote's associate, Vincent Donehue, holds the PI fort.

FROM FRONT ROYAL, Va., comes belated word that it's now Col. Judith Anderson . . . The Randolph-Macon Academy, where Luther Greene, husband of the actress prepped for Charlottesville, gave the "Medea" star that honor while she was in the neighborhood, the presentation being made by Cadet Battalion Major Joe Mast, son of Dr. and Mrs. Herman D. Mast, 1723 Hoban rd. nw.

THIS IS TALLOOSDAY—on which Tallulah will open the Olney's summer season tonight at 8:45 in Massa N. Cowd's "Private Lives."

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—S. Hurok, the impresario, is bringing the Palestine Symphony Orchestra to America for the 1950-1951 seasons. Leonard Bernstein and others will be guest-conductors for the tour . . . Hurok also will bring to this country the Shankar troupe of Hindu dancers and musicians who were successful here 12 years ago. And he'll have a $150,000 transportation bill with the Sadler Welles Ballet opening at the Metropolitan in October, and starring Moira Shearer of "Red Shoes." . . . Chicago and Boston will be the next cities to receive test-distributions of the new Cowles magazine, "Quick," which sold out in the six cities tested last week.

Henry Fonda made some Hollywood money this year, because his Brentwood estate was rented by 20th Century Fox for scenes in "Come to the Stable." . . . Celeste Holm, whose role is that of a French nun in the movie, was offered French lessons by the studio. "I don't need any," said Miss Holm, who was educated in Paris. "But there's a scene where I'm supposed to play tennis." The studio therefore gave her free tennis lessons. . . . The Louis de Rochemont film about a Negro family, "Lost Boundaries," was filmed at the Sparhawk Mansion in Portsmouth, N. H., built by Sir William Pepperell, who made his fortune as a slave-trader.

Jane Pickens probably will play the leading role in the Cheryl Crawford production of the musical version of "The Little Foxes" . . . A new Broadway producer cabled an offer to Sarah Churchill in London, and was startled to get a reply: "Sarah is in New York—Winston Churchill" . . . When Michael Arlen, who refers to himself as The Senior Armenian, heard the story of the separation of the William Saroyans, he said: "I don't say that Mr. Saroyan sometimes is immature. But I have told him that someday I hope to attend his twenty-first birthday."

The story is being told of a man named Rosoff who didn't believe his friend's tales of life behind the iron curtain. "I'm going there," he said, "and will cable my views to you." From Moscow he cabled: "Greetings from free Moscow in free Russia—Rosoff." From Warsaw he cabled: "Greetings from free Warsaw in free Poland—Rosoff." From Budapest he cabled: "Greetings from free Budapest in free Hungary—Rosoff" . . . and from Paris he cabled: "Greetings from Paris—Free Rosoff."

D. C. to Get Awards For Traffic Safety

By Jay Miller

The National Capital will get its "payoff" for its remarkable 1948 traffic safety record at ceremonies starting at 3 p. m. today in the District Building. The city won seven national traffic awards, and an award for community public relations.

Ned H. Dearborn, president of the National Safety Council, will present that group's grand awards to Commissioner John Russell Young and Col. Homer J. Garrison, jr., president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, will present the national traffic law enforcement award to Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of the Metropolitan Police Department.

The first time in traffic history that any city has been so honored, Washington made a clean sweep of the Nation's traffic safety prizes last year.

However, the citizens and organizations who cooperated to make this possible say this is "just a good beginning" of traffic safety accomplishments in the community.

Traffic authorities have long contended that the complicated system of crisscrossing streets resulting from Major L'Enfant's "wagon wheel" design for the United States Capital is a definite obstacle to a good safety record.

Yet, despite this handicap, the District of Columbia won these eight national awards:

1. The 1948 grand award in the National Traffic Safety Contest of the National Safety Council for all cities in the United States.

2. First prize in the 1948 National Traffic Safety Contest for cities of 500,000 or over.

3. Grand award in the 1948 National Pedestrian Protection Contest for all cities in the United States sponsored by the American Automobile Association.

4. First prize in the 1948 National Pedestrian Protection Contest for cities of 500,000 and over, sponsored by the AAA.

5. The 1948 award of the National Safety Council for "outstanding achievement" in maintaining a lower motor vehicle death record. (There were 52 motor vehicle deaths here in 1948, lowest figure in 25 years.)

6. The 1948 achievement award for traffic law enforcement of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

7. The 1947-1948 award for the "model traffic court" of the Nation, awarded by the American Bar Association.

8. The Community Public Relations Award of the American Public Relations Association for an outstanding job of educating the entire community to the vital need for cooperating to make the Nation's Capital traffic safe.

Arlington Wins Award

The nearby County of Arlington won the second place award in its population group of 100,000 to 200,000 in the National Traffic Safety Contest.

How did Washington do it? How has a community burdened with a virtual mass of triangular corners, ornamental but obstructive circles and a heavy volume of tourist traffic drawn from every State in the United States and all American Territories achieved this remarkable record?

In the opinion of George E. Keneipp, the Director of Vehicles and Traffic for the District of Columbia, residents of the National Capital deserve the lion's share of credit for helping to make it the "safest city in the Nation" from a traffic standpoint.

Keneipp believes sound application of the three E's of traffic safety—Engineering, Enforcement and Education—enabled the capital to capture the country's top traffic safety honors.

Judging for the National Safety Council and American Bar Association awards was on the basis of nine categories in the annual "inventory of traffic safety activities" for 1948.

Here is how the United States Capital stacked up:

1. A record low motor vehicle death record of 52 fatalities, lowest in 25 years.

2. Modernization of the District of Columbia traffic regulations to conform to the model traffic ordinance and the uniform vehicle code, and the program of driver licensing and the periodic motor vehicle inspections enforced by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

3. Strict traffic law enforcement. Despite the largest number of traffic cases in D. C. history during 1948, the Traffic Bureau had a high percentage of convictions. Preventive work was conducted in the Police Traffic Violators School and the District Jail Traffic School.

4. Intelligent use of accident records maintained by the Metropolitan Police Department and the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

5. A comprehensive traffic engineering program, including utilization of most effective traffic control signals, signs, markings and channelization, based on careful traffic studies, all a continuing project.

6. Work of the District Traffic Courts resulting in national recognition by leading jurists and lawyers of the United States.

7. An aggressive program of school traffic safety education in public, parochial and high schools of the community, with school patrols effectively used.

8. An education and public information program spearheaded by the District of Columbia Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board and the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

9. Close cooperation between all participating safety organizations with the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board and the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

10. Education of every District of Columbia resident and visitors alike to the importance of traffic safety and how all can work together to save the lives of drivers, passengers and pedestrians.

Supervision from the top is a characteristic of the District's traffic safety organization.

Every municipal department was able to contribute to the city-wide safety work through the official coordinating committee on which are represented the heads of city and Federal Government departments dealing with traffic and highway matters.

Full participation of private citizens and organizations in the community is assured through a public support body, the District of Columbia Commissioners' Traffic Board, headed by Arthur J. Sundlun. This group's important education and public information committee has A. Julian Brylawski as chairman.

The official coordinating committee has been in existence since 1931 and the public support group since 1925, and they have long since proved their worth. The National Capital won the awards because, in addition to citizen cooperation, there was fine cooperation between the many agencies interested in traffic safety.

Another vital factor was the work in traffic safety and education being carried on by the citizens' associations, women's organizations, the Washington Board of Trade, the Junior Chamber of Commerce, the Federation of Business Men's Associations, the American Automobile Association, the Keystone Automobile Club and many other District organizations interested in traffic safety.

The public, parochial and private schools made a contribution with their programs of safety education and school patrols.

The District of Columbia is expanding traffic safety education as funds will permit. School safety classes are an important means of keeping down accidents.

Drivers' training classes are conducted in four senior high schools and this program will be expanded as funds and facilities are made available.

Children and older people are usually the victims of fatal vehicular accidents and the city's low motor vehicle death record of 52 fatalities in 1948 is attributed in part to concerted efforts to instill traffic safety principles in students.

The Traffic Division, Metropolitan Police Department headed by Traffic Inspector Arthur E. Miller and Capt. Lorraine T. Johnson and the department as a whole rate their share of the credit.

Squad car men in the various precincts of the city also helped materially. The Metropolitan Police Department had the cooperation of the other law enforcement groups in the National Capital area, such as the United States Park Police, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and police departments of adjacent communities.

The D. C. Police Traffic Bureau kept abreast of new enforcement wrinkles by having three members study at the Northwestern University Traffic Institute. On their return, they passed on their knowledge to fellow traffic officers.

The Police Department operates a school for traffic violators. "Students" assigned from the courts attend three classes in fundamentals of good and safe driving conducted in the Municipal Building. A separate traffic school is conducted for traffic violators in the District Jail. This is sponsored jointly by the D. C. Department of Correction, the Police Department and the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

The Nation's Capital offers some unusual problems for enforcement officers. The Diplomatic Corps enjoys immunity from all traffic regulations. There is a phenomenal influx of tourist traffic. Often more than half the cars on D. C. streets are from out of the city. All States are usually represented on auto licenses observed on capital streets.

As an illustration that enforcement is strict, out of a total of 412,840 hazardous violations of driving laws, only 2097 were acquitted, dismissed or nolle-prossed.

D. C. Traffic Courts Rated Best in U. S.

Reed

RARE PICTURE—Efficient traffic courts are important to traffic safety and the local courts were rated best in the Nation for 1947-48 by the American Bar Association. In this picture, one of the few ever permitted here, are: George D. Neilson, Associate Judge of the Municipal Court; Walter F. Bramhall, clerk of the court; Charles H. Driscoll, clerk to Judge Neilson; Richard W. Barton, Assistant Corporation counsel; Richard A. Swann, docket clerk; Edward J. Nill, bailiff and the "defendant," posed by unnamed court attache

Dog Joins Blind Master Who Says He'll Quit Bottle

Atlanta, May 30 (U.P.).—Big Boy and his blind master were together again tonight, and W. C. Knight swore—in police court—that he'd love the dog and leave the bottle alone.

"I don't want to have to lose him," Knight said of the German shepherd that leads him about the city and carries his beggar's cup. "I'm not going to drink any more."

He took the pledge before Judge A. W. Callaway, who only a few days before had tried Knight on charges of starving Big Boy. The verdict in each case was a $12 suspended fine. This time the charge was drunkenness.

Knight, 34, was taken in hand by an uncle, J. A. Aughtman of Atlanta, who promised that he would have him "straighten out" or send him back to his mother in Macon, Ga.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

MEMO TO young America:

You, too, can become a Celebrity and command an invitation to the National Celebrities Golf Tournament. Many are the paths to that distinction, in this free land, and for example:

Just sing the Nation's songs better than anybody else, and you'll be invited, like Bing Crosby. Or command the stage, screen and radio audiences like Robert Leslie Hope, and you're in. And if you can chase the German Army across France, and come home to be appointed Chief of Staff, you have distinction. That's how Gen. Omar Bradley made it.

POVICH

Or if you're not military minded, just get yourself elected Senator from Illinois and rise to Majority Leader and you're in, like Scott Lucas. Or merely introduce a brief but bright foreign policy resolution like Senator William Fulbright, and they'll ask you in, too.

And by no means is it a man's world. Simply aim your career at law, achieve some eminence in that profession, and then get yourself appointed as the first woman ever to serve on the Federal Communications Commission. That's what Frieda Hennock did.

OR ASSEMBLE several million dollars somehow, and buy the New York Yankees—that helps. That's how Del Webb and Dan Topping became celebrated, and they're in. And if you are football minded, and can rise to eminence as the finest coach in the land at Notre Dame, and turn out unbeaten T-formation teams, you'll be a celebrity like Frank Leahy.

Oh, there's a hundred ways to become a Celebrity. Marry a star quarterback in the pro league, get yourself billed as the top star in a movie called "The Outlaw" and wear the Nation's sweaters better than any other girl of these times, and they'll ask you in, like they did Jane Russell.

And if you're handy with a pen, draw yourself a comic strip that is a "must" with readers. And it's better if the hero of the strip happens to be Joe Palooka. That was Ham Fisher's path to an invitation to play for the third straight year in the National Celebrities Tournament.

GO OUT AND GET a job commanding all the Nation's airmen like Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, and you, too, will be invited. Or latch on to a job as Vandenberg's boss, as Secretary for Air Stuart Symington did, and you're also a Celebrity. As a Marine you can make it also, if you're Commandant of all the United States Marines, like Gen. Clifton Cates.

Authoring a better Broadway column, like Leonard Lyons does, gets you into the tournament nicely. Or write a book called "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo" and then go on world assignment and live down a background as a sports writer, and you're in like Bob Considine.

It helps, too, if you can get a radio job that brings you $450,000 a year, and kid your sponsors around and go on television, and sell cigarettes and glass-wax and things. Arthur Godfrey got in that way.

EVEN A $50,000-A-YEAR job as czar of all baseball makes you a Celebrity. That was Commissioner A. B. Chandler's approach to a tournament invitation. Harry Wismer made it simply by becoming the hottest coast-to-coast sports broadcaster in the land, and winning a basket full of awards for his work.

If you can play golf very well, that's nice. Just become famous as probably Sammy Snead, and you're a Celebrity, or merely win the British Amateur and be able to afford plane rides all over the world like Frank Stranahan, and you'll be famous, too. Or win the woman's tennis championship of the world four times like Pauline Betz, or golf titles like Peggy Kirk and Grace Lenczyk, and they'll point you out as Celebrities.

Or pitch baseball like Lefty Grove and Lefty Gomez could, and if you're right handed just emulate Dizzy Dean. That'll get you famous and into the tournament, too, like them. Mr. Frank Pace made it by collaring the only kind of job of its kind in this country of 140 million. You, too, can be Director of the Budget, perhaps.

Philadelphia, May 30 (AP).—Big Bill Nicholson's arm injury was diagnosed as a torn muscle today. He'll be lost to the Philadelphia Phillies probably for the rest of the week.

Mangrum And Ferrier Defeated in Semifinals

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., May 30.—It's an all-Southern finish for an all-America golf tournament here tomorrow.

Sammy Snead, of Hot Springs, Va., and Johnny Palmer, of Badin, N. C., stroked their way to the finals of the PGA championship and will battle over a 36-hole, or less, route for Ben Hogan's undefended title.

For the second straight day, Snead had to rally to stay alive, and he did. His semifinal victim was Jim Ferrier, beaten 3 and 2, after holding a 2-up lead at the end of this morning's 18-hole round.

Palmer, compactly built little precisionist who a few short years ago was chased off a golf course because "you're too little to be a caddy," sidelined 1947 open Champion Lloyd Mangrum, of Chicago, 7 and 6.

This marks Snead's third appearance in the payoff bracket He was beaten in the 1938 final by Paul Runyan, but bagged the championship in 1942 by licking Jim Turnesa.

Second Bid by Johnny

In Palmer, however, Snead has a most worthy foe. Johnny is the year's fourth leading money winner, and his 69.55 average for 40 rounds of golf is one of the year's best marks.

The Snead-Ferrier semifinal produced everything from an eagle-deuce by Slamming Sam to a rhubarb with photographers that set off an ugly demonstration by a decidedly partial gallery.

The crowd of about 6000 cheered every move that their native son, Snead, made and at one time even went into huzzahs over their idol while Snead was still in the middle of his back swing.

Tough on Big Jim

Ferrier played great golf but got only scant recognition from the throng which had assembled to see Snead and Snead only win. It must have been tough, but the Australia-born San Franciscan never showed it.

What did upset the big, stoop-shouldered pitch-and-putt specialist, however, was a magnificent 70-yard wedge shot that Snead holed out on the 21st or third hole of the afternoon round. Snead pulled his coup at a time when Ferrier had won the 20th hole with a birdie three and owned a three-up advantage over the Masters champion and tournament favorite here.

Snead's booming drive carried about 285 yards down the middle. His wedge shot was hit with plenty of loft, plopping down six feet from the cup, bouncing once and then trickling into the cup for an eagle deuce.

That broke Ferrier's back. He won only one hole after that, the 28th, to square the match. Actually, however, Ferrier didn't even win that hole. Snead lost it by hooking a shot.

Cameramen in Trouble

Snead's hooked brassie shot also provoked the photographer-gallery incident. Two press service cameramen planted themselves in the ditch set to make a picture of Snead blasting out.

Before Snead arrived, the crowd demanded they leave, but the cameramen held their positions until Snead arrived and when he asked them to leave they did. Several marshals, meanwhile, rushed over to forcibly eject the cameramen, if necessary, and the crowd, riled that anyone would even dare to bother their idol, Snead, demanded the pho-

Masterson Wins First Game, Griffs Then Fold

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Nats licked the Yankees, and vice versa, yesterday before Griffith Stadium's largest crowd in eight years, an overflow turnout of 33,081 holiday fans who spilled by the hundreds onto the playing field behind ropes.

The Nat's success ended with the first game, a well-pitched 6-2 triumph by Walter Masterson in which the Yankees blew an early lead. At the end of the complete six-hour program, the Yanks had the second game, 13 to 3.

In that finale performance, the Yanks poured it on the Nats remorselessly with 20 hits against 5 Washington pitchers. The Nats couldn't out-produce Joe Page, a Yankee relief pitcher, who personally batted in three runs.

Sid Hudson lasted only four innings in the second game and bequeathed a 6-2 deficit to his equally hapless successors. Bobby Brown and Gene Woodling each fattened their batting averages with four hits. Allie Reynolds was the winning pitcher, though he didn't last out the sixth.

Wondrous, Briefly

But in that opener the Nats were slightly on the magnificent side. Sam Dente's fourth-inning single wiped out a 2-0 Yankee lead and they went on from their to hand Southpaw Tommy Byrne his first defeat of the season.

Masterson turned in a six-hit pitching job in holding the Yankees scoreless after the second inning to gain his first complete victory of the year.

Masteron gave no indications in the second inning that he would last out the first game. He hit Tommy Henrich with a pitched ball, threw a two-bagger to Berra and hit Bobby Brown with another pitch before getting anybody out.

Buckling down he disposed of Kryhoski on an infield pop, but

Holland Cracks Mark In Winning '500'

By Charles Dunkley

Indianapolis, May 30 (AP).—Fortune rode alongside jubilant Billy Holland in the 500-mile automobile race today.

Holland, 41-year-old driver of Reading, Pa., scorched the bricks of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway with record-breaking speed to win in 4 hours, 7 minutes, 15.97 seconds. He averaged 121.377 miles an hour, fastest time in the 33-year history of the event.

This performance blotted out the track record of 119.813 miles an hour established by Mauri Rose, South Bend, Ind., a three-time winner, in winning the 1948 race. Holland won with five miles to spare.

Closest to Holland, winner of about $45,000 in prize money, was Johnny Parsons, Burbank, Calif., with George Connor, Los Angeles, third. Myron Fohr, of Milwaukee, a first-time driver in the event, finished fourth. Fifth was Joie Chitwood, Cherokee Indian from Reading, Pa.

Holland, who finished second to Rose in the 1947 and 1948 races, took two years to hit the jackpot. The ill-luck that cost Holland the victory in the 1947 race when he misjudged a signal from his pit crew fell today to his teammate, Rose, who was forced to quit 20 miles from the finish when his engine stalled on the southwest turn. The car had to be dragged off the track.

Rose, seeking his third consecutive triumph, was in second place at the time.

While the ultimate plaudits of the holiday crowd of around 150,000 went to Holland, the real thrills of the race were supplied in the first 100 miles when three

Cary Middlecoff Joins U. S. Golfing Greats In Star-Studded Celebrities Tournament

Plays Saturday and Sunday

CARY MIDDLECOFF
Brushes up for Celebrities event

Cary Middlecoff, the Memphis dentist, yesterday added his name to the growing list of golfing greats entered in the National Celebrities tournament, next Saturday and Sunday, at the Army-Navy Country Club.

Middlecoff has the lowest scoring average on the professional circuit and is looked upon on the coming successor to Ben Hogan as the best playing pro in the business.

Middlecoff recently played the Army-Navy course and shot a brilliant 69. His familiarity with the layout will make him hard to beat for the championship of the Open division in the Celebrities.

Middlecoff will be in competition with such stars as Sammy Snead, Lew Worsham, Tommy Armour, Jimmy Thomson, Ed Dudley, Joe Novak, Jug McSpaden, Gene Sarazen, Walter Hagen, Ray Wade Hill, medalist in the PGA at Richmond; Jimmy Nichols, world's one-armed champion; Frank Stranahan, one of the best amateurs; Chick Evans, who won the National Open title as an amateur, and others.

Middlecoff was not eligible for the 1949 PGA championship, now being played at Richmond, because he has not been a professional long enough.

Stranahan Returns To Play in 'Celebs'

Frank Stranahan, ranking amateur from Toledo, returned from England yesterday to play in the National Celebrities Tournament.

Stranahan competed in the British amateur championship last week, but lost in the quarter-finals. He won the British title last year.

Giants Whip Bums, 7-4, After 2-1 Loss

New York, May 30 (AP).—After losing the opener of the Memorial Day doubleheader to Brooklyn, 2-1, when Jackie Robinson cracked a thirteenth-inning home run, the New York Giants, sparked by homers by Johnny Mize and Whitey Lockman, bounced back to win the second game, 7-4.

A crowd of 53,053 watched the standoff which left the two teams still in a three-way tie with Boston for first place.

Ralph Branca's streak of seven straight victories came to an end in the nightcap as the Giant pounded him for six runs in two innings which included homers by Lockman and Mize. Each came with one on.

Clint Hartung gained the decision though he needed help from Andy Hansen, who pitched no-hit ball for the last two and two-thirds frames.

Play was held up for about 10 minutes until the rumpus was settled. Snead came out short, took a par five on the fairly easy hole while great-putting Ferrier was down in four to square the match.

Snead parred the twenty-ninth with a four while Ferrier went one over and one down. Sam got a birdie deuce on the short thirty-first to go two-up and made it three-up on the thirty-third when he dropped a 1-footer for a birdie three while Ferrier two putted from 3 feet.

When he overshot the green on the thirty-fourth while Sam was 10 feet away in two, Ferrier picked up both balls and conceded Snead the hole which ended the match.

Snead was eight under par for the day, but that was only lukewarm compared to Palmer who was 10 under for the 31 holes he played.

Palmer never let Mangrum get ahead. The match was close through 22 holes after which Mangrum tired and started spraying his tee shots. That was fatal against a sharpshooter like Palmer.

Johnny made the morning turn one up with a 32, four under par, to a 33.

Palmer took four holes to three coming home to go to lunch two up with a 66 to a 69, Mangrum's tee-shot wildness cost him two of the holes.

Lloyd almost holed an eagle to win the nineteenth, first afternoon hole, but Palmer grabbed the next one with a bird to go two up again.

Palmer then won five holes in a row from the twenty-third to twenty-seventh when the tiring Mangrum used up 24 shots.

Seven down at the afternoon turn, it was hopeless for the nonchalant Mangrum.

Dear Folks:

Stanley Greene, jr. of Leesburg, Va., and E. L. Miller of Martinsburg, W. Va., are tied for training honors at this meeting. Greene saddled Arthur August's Colored Boy on the holiday card to move into the deadlock with four successes. Favorite players have been doing OK here. In the first 88 races, 38 public choices came home in front. Freddie Kratz, with eight winners, is leading the riders still here. Willie Downs and Bobby Mitchell each had nine before leaving for Delaware Park. Belle Moose is the only three-time winning horse so far at this session. Mickey McGuire, racing form trackman, was taken ill last week and may face an operation in Baltimore this week. See you on the rail.

Decision This Week Expected on Layoffs In Public Buildings

This is the week of decision at the Public Buildings Administration. The question is whether to give provisional lay-off notices to 2000 of its employes.

At this time all indications point to a decision to give out 30-day discharge notices on an if-and-when basis before the end of this week. The projected 2000 layoff would be about equally divided between Washington and PBA's field offices.

The cut must be made if PBA's budget as approved by the House is enacted into law. However, agency officials went before the Senate Appropriations over the week-end to appeal for a restoration of a major part of the House cut.

The House made a 10 per cent cut in PBA's budget. The slash was made on the theory that Government activities would be given a similar cutback. Should that happen, then PBA, a service agency, would be able to take the cut since it wouldn't have as many Federal buildings and activities to service.

If made, the layoff would affect all PBA activities since the House cut was across-the-board. The agency would have less money to buy coal, fuel oil, mops, buckets, etc

The threatened layoff would hit elevator operators, charwomen and guards as well as architects, supervisors and administrative personnel. PBA has had a semifreeze on its personnel for the past month. Very few of its vacancies have been filled in a move to make any layoff as light as possible.

OVERSEAS: The Army is working out a plan to replace many of its civilians in Japan with military officers and men. It's now estimated that half of the United States civilian jobs in Japan will be taken over by military people before the end of this calendar year.

Many of the civilians went to Japan on three-year contracts—contracts that will expire beginning this fall. The Army will renew a minimum of the contracts.

STORY: Layoffs in Government have their humorous as well as their serious side. This is a letter I received the other day from the wife of a discharged employe:

"My husband is a mechanic and he has been discharged from his Government job. He's a veteran and they shouldn't do that to veterans.

"He told me that he was fired because he was not disabled. How can I get him that way so he can keep his job? We have a new baby and he needs to work.

"One time when he was drinking I hit him over the head with a skillet and I don't think he is as bright as he used to be. He still has a knot on his head. Will that make him get his job back? Tell me what to do."

Perhaps this would have been an appropriate answer to the skillet-packing Momma:

"Lay that skillet down, Mom, lay that skillet down. Otherwise, you'll fix your husband so he won't be able to work. The disabilities you give him won't help get his job back. They'd help him only if he suffered them in the Big Wars."

JUMP: Federal employment during April took a big jump—a net increase of 13,200 over March. The increase here was 1100 to bring the total in executive agencies to 215,000. Army, Agriculture, Post Office, Commerce and Air Force all reported increases of more than 1000 employes. Navy was again the big loser.

JOB NEWS: Civil Service has ordered the firing by June 30 of nonstatus training specialists in status jobs in grades CAF-7 through CAF-12 and P-2 through P-5 . . . An exam is coming up for geophysicists to fill vacancies in Coast & Geodetic Survey and Reclamation Service. The jobs pay $3727 to $6335 . . . Another test to be announced is for sanitation inspectors in the Public Health Service. The jobs will pay from $2974 to $4103 . . . About 1000 applicants will be given the stenotyping test today and Friday . . . Get details on microphotographer exam at Civil Service information office.

VA: Nine employes each with more than 30 years of service are retiring today at Veterans Administration. They are: Ethel C. Dana, Faustine O. Dorough, Albin M. Emler, Dr. William J. Hoffner, Agnes M. Huber, Nellie O. Jones, Lillie Lewis, Harriet L. Tuttle and John Waterson.

Slot Machine Just Amusing As Vote on Payoff Nears

Word Passed Along To Avoid Illegal Acts Which Would Bolster Opposition

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

Slot machines labeled "for amusement only" appeared to be operating on just that basis in Prince Georges County yesterday, as both proponents and opponents girded for Thursday's referendum on whether to legalize cash payoffs.

A reporter's visit to several places, where the machines were operating months before legalized payoffs were suggested, uncovered no evidence that players were receiving anything more than the free plays which automatically register on an electric scoreboard whenever a "hit" is made.

In a tavern, where "over the counter" payoffs have been observed in the past, a player was asked by the bartender: "Why don't you hold off playing those things until after Thursday? Then if you hit we'll be able to pay you off."

Word Passed Around

With opposition to legalized payoffs mounting, it was learned, slot machine interests have passed the word around that an illegal activity must be carefully avoided. The lid has been clamped tightly shut, at least until after Thursday.

Proponents of cash payoffs have warned concessionaires that violations of the law at this time would provide their opponents with a powerful propaganda weapon in advance of the referendum.

Church groups and others opposed to the play-for-pay system already have questioned the scruples of the slot machine operators, they point out. With the future of their business probably resting on the referendum's outcome, they are reported anxious to avert any action that might support the opposition's charges.

Getting Little Play

Although most of the places were well filled with holiday crowds yesterday the slot machines were getting little play—possibly because of the knowledge that payoffs have been ruled out.

Meanwhile, church groups in the county continued to circulate pamphlets urging parishioners to get out and vote against legalizing the payoffs. Their campaign, spearheaded by the Hyattsville Ministerial Union, has been well organized in contrast to the machine operators' word-of-mouth efforts to enlist support for the proposal.

Fear Vote Will Be Close

The machine operators have been confident a majority of county voters favor legalized payoffs, but in the face of the recently-developed opposition, they are fearful balloting may be close. In taverns and restaurants, they are urging their patrons to go to the polls to offset what they believe will be a fairly solid vote mustered by the opposition.

Besides the church groups, opposition to the payoffs has been voiced by the county's Civic Federation and the League of Women Voters. Only group to work actively in the interest of the machine operators in the Hotel and Restaurant Association.

The vote will be held from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. Thursday at regular electoral polling places in the county.

Two Released on Bond

George E. Poindexter, 27, of 621 C st. sw., and David P. McGognoy, 28, of 3318 5th st. se., yesterday were released on $1000 bond each in Municipal Court on charges of robbery. Their cases were continued to Thursday.

They were arrested early Sunday after John J. Pettit of Falls Church, Va., complained that they beat him and robbed him of $20 after he offered them a ride to Falls Church.

6 Rescued in Yacht Sinking Return Healthy, But Hoarse

The Washington Post

A Washington yachting party which spent two hours in the Potomac River when their boat sank Sunday, reurned last night hoarse but happy.

"We're sill hoarse from yelling—excuse us if we don't want to talk," said Wilbur Sherwood of the Chasteton Hotel, whose boat sank about 9:30 p. m. Saturday about 75 miles south of Washington near Colonial Beach with five other persons and a dog aboard.

Apparently none the worse last night for their experience were Sherwood, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Crosby, 5305 Dorset pl. nw.; Dr. Leon Clayton, 2948 Macomb st. nw.; Miss Ruth Valentine, 1417 Belmont st. nw.; Miss Virginia Shea of Annapolis, and "Smokey," the Crosby's Dalmatian.

The party left Washington Saturday aboard Sherwood's 26-foot yacht, We Too.

At the entrance to Breton Bay a water intake hose blew off and the craft's hold began to flood. The We Too headed for shore, about a mile and a half distant, ran aground on a sandbar at nearby Huggins Point, and sank.

The party clung to an exposed portion of the craft for two hours before their shouts were heard and they were taken aboard the motor vessel Seafarer, an 80-foot cruiser owned by D. Tracy Gardiner, president of the Provident Life Insurance Co., 712 12th st. nw.

The Seafarer brought the party to Abell's Wharf, Leonardtown, where they boarded Crosby's yacht, Nixie, and returned to his berth at 1300 Maine ave. sw.

Work-Relief Study Begun By District

Welfare Department Undertakes Survey In Event of Need

A re-estimate of personnel and space which would be needed if the District government should initiate a work-relief program has been undertaken by the Department of Public Welfare. No decision has been made to start such a program here.

John W. Tramburg, welfare director, said yesterday he received authorization for the survey last March, but that precise information on how many people would be needed to administer a work relief program has not been completed.

Tramburg said there is no strong indication of an immediate recession in Washington, although there is a smaller job turnover, and employers are becoming more particular in filling vacancies.

New York City's Department of Welfare has announced it is drawing plans for the first work relief program there since the depression. Raymond M. Hilliard, Welfare Commissioner, said the New York plan was drafted because of the increasing difficulty the Welfare Department and State Employment Service have had in finding jobs for employable persons on relief.

He pointed out that in recent months there have been mounting layoffs in white collar and factory employment.

40-Year Absence

Woman Gets A. B. Despite Long Layoff

Forty years' absence from the books failed to deter American University's oldest graduating senior from making all A's and B's while earning the degree she received Sunday.

Mrs. Albert E. Dieterich, of 3701 McKinley st. nw., quit her studies at the old Wilson Normal School in 1905 at the end of one year to be married when 18.

After an interim of 40 years devoted to raising a family of two sons and two daughters and becoming a grandmother she resumed her pursuit of a college degree at American University in the fall of 1945.

The university allowed her 10 credit hours for her work at the normal school and she breezed through the remainder of her studies for an A. B. degree in English with top grades.

Since receiving her long-awaited degree from the hands of Dr. Paul F. Douglass, university president, Sunday she is now looking forward to the next step in her life in December when she expects to become a great-grandmother.

Pictures and Heirloom Lost in Missing Purse

A 27-year-old housewife hopes someone can help make yesterday a happy holiday and birthday for her by returning a lost handbag with pictures of her baby and a heirloom bracelet that she lost on a streetcar.

Mrs. William Harrell, 1006 Monroe st. nw., told police she missed the handbag after she left the streetcar at 9th and U sts. nw. She said it also contained $5 and a letter from her mother.

Montgomery Nonpartisan Bill Passed

Council Enacts Plan Rejected Twice by Assembly; Decision By Court Is Sought

The Montgomery County Council, in its longest legislative session yet, yesterday enacted legislation providing for nonpartisan elections in the county.

The act, which goes directly counter to the Maryland State Lindsay law which requires party designation for all candidates for county offices, appeared headed almost certainly for a court test.

The county council acted under its authority to pass local legislation.

Council President Frederick P. Lee, after the county measure had passed, urged opponents to bring a court test quickly so a decision may be obtained before the 1950 county election.

Refused by Assembly

Seekers of nonpartisan elections had taken their plea twice to the Maryland General Assembly, but each time the Assembly refused to repeal the Lindsay Act.

The council also passed a bill giving itself authorization to issue $4,265,000 in school construction bonds; $1,000,000 in bonds for repair or replacement of roads, streets, bridges, culverts and viaducts, for any needed rights-of-way, and for storm sewers; and $200,000 in off-street parking lot bonds which would be paid off from the county's business district tax.

In other actions, the council tabled three bills pertaining to libraries.

One, introduced by Mrs. Dorothy Himstead, a member of the council, would have set up a countrywide library system.

This bill was tabled by Mrs. Himstead's request after she said she believed people of the county "are not ready" for a countywide system.

Mrs. Himstead also made the motion that tabled another library bill, which had been introduced by Councilman Lewis Meriam, to create a library tax area in the Kensington area to support the Noyes Library.

Fort Belvoir Soldier Dies After Crash South of Alexandria

Seven From District Killed in Holiday Weekend Accidents; Girl Cyclist Injured

A Fort Belvoir soldier died at the post hospital yesterday of injuries received in a two-car crash shortly before midnight on Route 1, 4½ miles south of Alexandria.

He was Sergt. William E. Lewis, 24, of Schoolfield, Va., assigned to the 9829th Engineer Battalion, at the fort.

His death brought the number of Greater Washington persons killed in holiday weekend traffic to seven. Of these, four were Washington residents killed Saturday in an accident near Shallotte, N. C.

The automobile driven by Sergt. Lewis collided with another operated by Stanley C. Tessman, School Battalion, Fort Belvoir, and overturned off the highway.

Virginia State Police said three other soldiers riding with Lewis were treated at the post hospital for minor injuries. They were identified as Sergt. Calvin Griffin, 24; Sergt. William Tinsley, 22, and Pfc. John W. Holmes, 28, all of the 9829th Battalion.

No charges have been placed as result of the accident, police said.

Two Others Injured

Two persons were injured about 2 p. m. yesterday in a truck-autobicycle collison on Route 236, one and one half miles east of Annandale, Va.

The girl cyclist, 13-year-old Beryl Jones, of Route 1, Annandale, was admitted to Arlington Hospital with a fractured skull. Also admitted at Arlington Hospital was Grant Boles, 84, of Newmarket, Va., a passenger in the truck, with undetermined injuries.

According to Fairfax County police, the truck driven by Chester Hayes, 26, of 2026 S. Oakland st., Arlington, and loaded with five tons of flagstones, turned over in an attempt to avoid the preceding automobile which stopped suddenly as the girl swerved her cycle onto the highway. The girl was struck either by the truck or the falling flagstones, they said.

The truck also crashed into a parked car, owned by James S. Campbell, 1313 Cleveland st., Alexandria, according to police. Fairfax police did not have the name of the car which stopped suddenly.

Reckless Driving Charged

Hayes was charged with reckless driving and was held in Fairfax jail last night pending $500 bond. No hearing date had been set.

In Prince Georges County, William J. Talbott, 27, of 12 Kiggs rd., Hyattsville, suffered scalp lacerations in a traffic accident about 5:45 p. m. on Defense hwy., near Landover Hills. He was admitted to Prince Georges General Hospital for observation.

Two persons suffered minor injuries when the small Austin in which they were riding collided with a Capital Transit bus at 18th and S sts. nw.

Treated at Emergency Hospital were Krishen Dayal, 27, of 1825 R st. nw., the driver of the Austin, and Alena Justice, 22, of 1812 R st. nw.

Driver of the bus, according to police, was Robert Slagle, 22, of 1825 F st. nw.

Eight persons were injured, including three Washingtonians, in a head-on collision last night on Route 301 near Waldorf, Md. All except one, however, escaped serious injury.

According to Maryland State Trooper J. A. Barber, the injured, all treated at Physicians Memorial Hospital at La Plata, Md., were identified as:

James Glauber, 21, of New York, who was still unconscious late last night after suffering from a fractured skull and collar bone as well as multiple cuts; Louis Robinson,

Bond Fixed for Painter Held On 8-Year-Old Girl's Charges

George William Humphrey, 47-year-old Takoma Park (Md.) painter arrested Sunday on a carnal knowledge charge, yesterday was charged with enticing a child for immoral purposes and placed under $5000 bond for grand jury action.

In a hearing before Municipal Court Judge Aubrey B. Fennell, Humphrey also was placed under $900 bond and charged with three traffic violations. No papers were issued on the carnal knowledge charge.

The charges grew out of incidents on Saturday, when police say Humphrey picked up three children and offered them money to wash windows. He later let two of the girls out of his car and kept the third child, an 8-year-old girl, with him until about 2 a. m. Sunday, according to police.

Girl Says He Gave Her Beer

All three girls have identified Humphrey as the man who picked them up. The 8-year-old girl said he gave her a can of beer which she drank. Police said the beer apparently made the child too drunk to give a clear account of the time she spent with Humphrey.

Humphrey has admitted, police say, that he had both beer and wine in the car when he picked up the children. He said he did not remember picking up the girls.

A physical examination of the child has shown that she had sexual relations Saturday night, although there was no evidence of force, police said. Further laboratory tests are being made.

Police reached Humphrey at his home, 1212 Myrtle ave., Takoma Park, shortly after 2 a. m. Sunday. He appeared voluntarily at the 6th Precinct at about 2:30 a. m.

Jury Trial On Traffic Charges

Police had received a description of the car when the children were first picked. It was further identified when police received a report that it had collided with one driven by James S. Roberts, 22, of 4621 Lewis ave. se., at Blair rd. and Aspen st. nw, at about 7:30 p. m.

Police have charged Humphrey with driving while drunk, unsafe backing and leaving after colliding in connection with the collision. He will be given a jury trial on the traffic charges June 15.

Conviction on the enticement charge would carry maximum penalty of five years imprisonment. The charge is contained in the new Miller Act.

$3-$5 Forfeits Making Skeptics Believe In Street Signs

Motorists Disregard Police Barricade On Benning Rd., Land in Station House

Some sort of mass delusion has been afflicting motorists at Benning rd. and G st. se.

It has police at the Fourteenth Precinct flabbergasted, but not too flabbergasted to collect miscellaneous $3 and $5 collaterals forfeited by those so deluded.

Seems last Monday police barricaded two blocks of Benning at the G st. intersection, unsafe because of some storm sewer placement. Police put up two barricades, two red flares and two red lanterns on the east barricade, posted a "one way" sign, a "street closed" sign, a "do not enter sign" on the east barricade and two "detour" signs, a "do not enter" sign and a "street closed" sign on the west barricade.

Since then more than a hundred southeast-bound motorists have been sign-blind, going right throught the barricade, and going from there to the Fourteenth Precinct at the behest of police.

Standard excuse has been that there WERE no signs.

This, too, flabbergasted police to the point where they sent an official photographer to Benning to take pictures of the signs.

Now, they have a picture of the signs under the counter at precinct headquarters, and every time the old alibi pops up, police pop up with the picture.

Some motorists have been forfeiting $5 collateral for passing a barricade. Some have gotten off for $3 collateral for disobeying an official sign.

Police still can't understand what happened.

At any rate, the barricade is going to stay—for several months, until the storm sewer work is completed.

Area News in Brief

Virginians Dig Fast To Salvage Shrubs

It looked like a gold rush yesterday with scores of persons digging in the shrub-filled fields of Wescott's Nursery, across Lee blvd. from Jefferson Village near Falls Church.

The reason was that work had started on a housing project which will extend across land once used by the nursery. The diggers were scrambling to get the shrubs out of the area before bulldozers destroyed them.

A resident of Jefferson Village said he noticed someone digging up shrubs in the morning as a bulldozer started to clear the land. In the time it took him to decide to salvage some shrubs for himself, a dozen other amateur landscape gardeners had the same idea. A couple of hours later, he reported, at least 50 cars were parked beside the highway, while their drivers dug up anything worth saving.

All day long, he said, cars drove by, getting wild roses, wild honeysuckle, wisteria and bridal wreath.

The land was recently rezoned by Fairfax County supervisors for what the builder said would be a development of nearly 500 single-family homes.

Stone in Window Is Latest Of Northeast Race Incidents

The Washington Post

Mrs. Odis Von Blasingame, holding 9-month-old son, Odis, jr., points to broken window pane. Stone was hurled through glass Saturday night

A stone hurled through a front window is the latest of a series of incidents which have plagued a Negro family since it moved into a white neighborhood about two months ago.

The latest incident occurred between 8:30 and 11 p. m. Saturday night, while Odis Von Blasingame and his family were away from their home at 3303 Ames st. ne., Blasingame told Fourteenth Precinct police yesterday.

Blasingame, an advertising salesman for the newspaper Afro-American, his wife, Georgetta, employed in the Atomic Energy Commission Office of Information, and their 9-month-old son, Odis, jr., moved into the modest row house April 2.

Two hours later the house was stoned twice, with two rear windows broken, and a trash fire of unidentified origin broke out near the backyard picket fence.

On May 21 the telephone line was reported cut at the rear of the house, and the top of the 1935 Ford belonging to Blasingame was slashed.

Ever since the family moved to Ames st., they also have been plagued with anonymous phone calls.

Even while a Washington Post photographer was taking a picture of the window yesterday, the phone rang. "Lots of people in the neighborhood have broken windows and don't have them photographed," the caller said.

"It's an old man," Blasingame explained. "He's called before."

When the Blasingamse first moved into the house, many of the anonymous telephone calls were obscene, but that type has dropped off.

Callers are more conversational now, the Blasingames said. One anonymous woman wanted to know if Blasingame was a Communist. He told her no, he was a Christian and his father has been a Methodist minister.

Another wanted to know if they were out to destroy the country by moving into a white neighborhood.

Lately some of the callers have been resorting to symbolism, talking about "white paint with no black streaks."

The calls are most frequent on weekends, and many of the callers appear to be young women, Mrs. Blasingame said.

"I thought the calls were beginning to wear off, Blasingame said, "but I guess not."

Woman Beats Off Humpbacked Man

A 38-year-old woman successfully fought off an unknown assailant who beat her and tried to force her into a dark part of the street as she returned home from a grocery store last night.

According to police, Mrs. Margaret E. Lee of 1442 W st. se. was grabbed from behind by a man she described as "humpbacked" as she was walking along V street near 15th after purchasing a loaf of break at a nearby store at about 11 p. m.

She screamed and fought the man, she told police, causing him to finally release her and run. Neighbors attracted to the scene by her screams searched the neighborhood, but found no one answering the description of her assailant.

Cardinal Suhard Dies in Paris, 75

Paris, May 30 (AP).—Emmanuel Celestine Cardinal Suhard, Archbishop of Paris, died early today of a heart atack. He was 75.

The death reduced the membership of the Sacred College of Cardinals to 55.

Cardinal Suhard was born April 5, 1874, in the French village of Bains-sur-les Marches. He became a priest in 1898, and was consecrated Bishop of Bayeux and Lixieux in 1928. He was made a cardinal in 1935 and appointed Archbishop of Paris in 1940.

At Vatican City, an informed source said Pope Pius XII learned of the death with "profound sorrow." Cardinal Suhard is the fifteenth cardinal to die since the consistory of 1946 which raised the Sacred College to its full strength of 70 members. The death revived reports at Vatican City that a new consistory might be called to bring the college up to full strength.

Of the remaining cardinals, 21 are Italian and 34 of other nationalities. One of these, Josef Cardinal Mindszenty of Hungary, now is in prison, convicted by the Communist government of Hungary of treason.

Von Rintelen Dies at 72; Kaiser's Ace Spy

London, May 30 (AP).—Capt. Franz von Rintelen, a German master spy and saboteur in the United States in World War I, died a peaceful London suburbanite today.

von Rintelen

Once the Kaiser's No. 1 cloak and dagger artist, he was credited with destroying 32 munitions ships. He blamed his capture by Allied intelligence on the bungling of Franz von Papen, German military attache to the United States and later Hitler's ace diplomat.

He lived the last days of his 72 years in a quiet London suburb. He collapsed in a subway station early today and died soon after in a hospital.

Von Rintelen went to Washington in 1915 ostensibly as a diplomat, but actually to spend his time placing pencil-shaped time bombs in the holds of ships bound for Europe with munitions from the United States.

British Intelligence finally trapped him after a series of fires and explosions along the New York waterfront. A young British girl in the intelligence service in Washington broke the code by which he communicated with Berlin. The girl worked through a secretary in the German Embassy.

By this code the British sent a fake message to Von Rintelen and lured him onto a Dutch ship under a Swiss name bound for Germany.

The British intercepted the ship and Von Rintelen was taken before the man who had outwitted him, Sir Reginald Hall, British naval intelligence chief.

In 1917 he was returned to the United States and tried for sabotage. He was sentenced to four years in jail, but was given a presidential pardon in 1920 on condition that he leave the United States.

He returned to Germany, but did not get along with the Nazis and settled in Britain in 1933 when Hitler came to power.

He became a close friend and dinner companion of the man who captured him, Sir Reginald.

He wrote two books about his spy career, "The Dark Invader" and "The Return of the Dark Invader." It was a special source of pride to him that the late King George V of England once listed "Dark Invader" among his five favorite books.

He lectured widely in England during the 1930s, attacking Hitler and declaring he was "a Prussian with a nostalgia for the days of the Kaiser."

He was interned on the Isle of Man at the outbreak of the second World War as a dangerous alien.

He declared of the 1944 bomb plot against Hitler: "How it was mismanaged. I should have managed that affair. Bungling from end to end."

He never dropped his fastidiousness of dress. Tall, handsome, with clear, cold gray eyes and close Prussian haircut, he was the picture of his undercover career.

Much of his private life was a mystery. He married, but the marriage ended in divorce. His only daughter, now married, will fly to London from Toronto, Canada, for the funeral.

Mary Haworth's Mail

On Verge of Marrying Wealthy Lovely Girl Whom He Doesn't Love or Desire, Man Says He Beat Rivals by Lying and Needs Guidance

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am about to be married to a very wealthy and lovely girl whom I don't seriously love or desire. She has been devoted and exceptionally kind to me during the three years I have dated her. I am six years her senior and we met when she was 17.

Although our steady courtship has done a lot to bring me to Nan's social level, I don't have a similar background—and that's the problem in a nutshell. I am tall, nice looking and attractive to women, especially young girls, and during the war I was engaged to two other girls, but I never took them seriously—so haven't mentioned them to Nan.

She is an heiress, worth over half a million dollars since her father died a year ago; and now that we are both about to finish college we plan to marry. I am working in her father's place, have kept other men from her by lying about them, and although I don't have the respect of some of my associates, they realize that I will be in charge before long and they act accordingly.

Should I forsake the little conscience I still retain and proceed into loveless marriage and a luxurious life? Or should I leave Nan and go elsewhere, to find a girl who has no wealth, but only a background similar to mine? Please give me your opinion.

A. F.

Is He Honestly Seeking Light?

DEAR A. F.: Taking the story at face value, assuming this is the third time you've been engaged, without "seriously loving or desiring" the girl in any instance, I think it's time to take stock of yourself and see what's wrong inside that makes you a bounder.

Wherever you go, whomsoever you meet or court or cheat or desire, always you will have yourself on your hands, and until you get yourself straightened out and functioning rationally, you can't form a satisfactory relationship with anyone. And so long as you have no satisfactory durable relationship, you cannot enjoy life—even if luxury is yours to command.

Possibly you're writing tongue-in-cheek, to test this column's credulity and amuse your friends. Or maybe you're coining a confessional yarn aimed to smear some chap you hate, trying to get him in bad with his girl whom you'd like to win. But then again, maybe you're "on the level" and honestly trying, for the moment, to make connection with reality.

Innate Despair His 'Bad Angel'

THEREFORE my advice is to stay frieds with Nan for the time being, and postpone marriage—without breaking the engagement—until you've had psychiatric help in exploring the intricate network of inner conflicts, shames, fears, etc., that sabotage expression of your true self, and drive you to defensive sham and repetitive withdrawal from alliances formed.

If you can be honest here, there is honesty in you, and a general layout of decent character awaiting recognition to bring it to light, I have no doubt. But it seems you have a compulsive tendency to despise, distrust and damn yourself; and that this neurotic self-depreciation is the "bad angel" in your nature,—the block to right living that you need to get rid of

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

"It takes time to learn to eat."

That seems to be a stupid statement if ever there was one, doesn't it? We know that the baby comes equipped with a sucking reflex and that children know how to get things into their mouths without coaching.

But in our society, we have a particular way of eating—one involving use of knife, fork, spoon and cup. And many a parent becomes impatient because it seems as though their three-, four-, five- and even six-year-olds are exasperatingly slow in learning to eat properly. To us, who have long since gone through the process of learning to use table utensils skilfully, such lagging seems to be due to laziness or carelessness.

Actually, the skills of eating, which we adults use so readily are difficult ones. We can't remember how long it was before we could cut well with a knife or get food on a fork without a "pusher."

One way of getting a better picture of the difficulty and thereby having more patience with our children is to tackle a similar skill which we have never learned. One might get a pair of chopsticks, for instance, and see how much time elapses before they can be used comfortably and with skill. Whether or not you try this experiment, it is well to stop and remember that "it takes time to learn to eat."

Lesson for Overweights

Courageous 5-Footer Loses 60 Pounds, Set To Diet Off 40 More

By Ida Jean Kain

MY DIETICIAN'S cap is clear off to the reducer of the year who, in the face of all odds, is doing a magnificent job of normalizing her weight. This is her story . . .

"I am one of those little women, needing high heels to make five feet tall, who should never weigh over 100 pounds, dripping wet! You will understand that with my very small frame, my maintenance requirements are lower than average, and consequently I cannot lose weight except on an extremely low calorie allowance—under 1000, near 800. I think, tooting my own horn, that I deserve even more credit for sticking to a regime like that one!

IDA JEAN KAIN

"Too, my metabolism isn't what it should be. I have always been a very poor 'burner-upper' of fuel, prone to store ever bite. To complicate things, I have anemia and low blood pressure, despite all my fat. My glands suddenly went awry, and I jumped from 105 to 162 pounds in a few months. Eventually I went on up to 218 pounds! I am one of the best examples in the world that even glandular overweights can diet off fat. During the year I have lost 65 pounds—but I need to lose at least 40 more.

"Now, being human, and having a very normal love of good food—good, fattening food—I fall from grace time and again. I defy anyone to lose that many pounds and not slip up now and then. But I always return to the diet. That is the most important thing I have learned from long experience with dieting—don't let it throw you with a whole-hog-or-none attitude, which is my own natural inclination. Sometimes it takes days of trying, to get straightened out again after a lapse, but all at once comes a good day, and I'm off to the races!

"I would say to a woman facing a long siege and a lot of pounds to lose: Do not allow yourself to think of the staggering and disheartening total. Aim at the next lower bracket. For instance, I now weigh just 2 or 3 pounds over the 150 mark. I am concentrating all my efforts on getting into the 140's and so on. To paraphrase, take care of the 10s and the 50s will take care of themselves.

"Unhappily, when one is so much overweight, it takes quite a while to show much loss except on the scales. It's some time before you hear the cheering greeting: 'My dear, you've lost weight—you look wonderful!' But ah, when you do . . ."

It Can Be Done

ANY startling change of weight that comes with almost no warning is reason to suspect a glandular disturbance. Our model reducer gained suddenly, from 105 to 162, in a few months . . . and went on up to 218 pounds, doubling her normal weight, for she is less than five feet tall. Under the doctor's supervision, she has lost 65 pounds. But, as she points out, she's the one who had to do the reducing, and she wants other glandular overweights to know it can be done . . .

"It goes without saying," she continued, "that any woman who has much weight to lose should be under the care of her doctor all the time. Not only does she need his medical help, but she will find weighing-in regularly a great incentive hewing to the line. A dislike of losing face is a great will-builder and spine-stiffener. Then, too, if they are not contradicated, the doctor may be able to prescribe appetite curbers. Since I am a chronic low blood pressure case, I can have all the help that science can give. But there is a mental desire to enjoy the pleasures of the table, as well as a physical one, and it still takes considerable self-control to refrain, all curbers to the contrary notwithstanding!

"I dieted off a great many pounds once before, only to eat it back on faster than I took it off. No more such wasted effort for me. Once I reach normal weight, I am going to allow myself a five-pound margin. I will eat what I like until I have gained five pounds. Then I will clamp down and take off that five pounds. That way, I do not have to face the future totally devoid of goodies. At the same time I do intend to educate my tastes as much as possible toward what is better for me.

Vacation Is Prize

"I HAVE gone from a size 52 to size 42, a chronic backache has vanished, and I feel like a new woman. The loss of weight and the lift to my morale let me tear into my chores with an energy and enjoyment that amaze me.

"As the crowning reward, one of my numerous sons is giving me a trip next summer when I shall have attained my desired size. My first real vacation in 23 years of family raising. I will have a complete new wardrobe in my nice little size, and the supreme bliss of displaying myself to a large group of relatives who have not seen me weighing less than 200 pounds for many years and who have no idea what I am doing—perhaps they won't know me!

"If there is anything in this letter to encourage some other middle-aged woman who thinks she can't lose weight—when the lucky creature can probably eat a lot more than I can and still lose—use it. Think how many need only to lose a mere 40 pounds or so. I still have that to do after already losing 65. Shame on them!"

Yes, my dietician's cap is clear off to this courageous reducer.

About Finish For Picture Frame

How can one finish natural wood picture framing? We secured enough mitered pieces to frame a map. We wish to achieve a light finish by the antiquing method. Apparently the lumber was top quality and there are some very dark stripes in several places. How will we be able to cover these so that they do not show through the finish?

AN APPRECIATVE READER

To give the frame an antique finish, a ground coat of either white or cream flat paint is applied. This should completely cover the black streaks, but if one coat doesn't cover, apply two. Now, when the paint is completely dry, sandpaper smooth, wipe away loose particles and apply a coat of glaze. Glaze is similar to varnish and as soon as it is applied, the wet glaze is wiped with a soft, lintless cloth to remove most of the glaze in the high spots, leaving it in the low spots and carvings. You can buy glaze at paint stores or it can be made by using varnish thinned with one fourth as much turpentine and tinted with color-in-oil in brown, black or some other dark color.

How do you remove nail polish from a chenille bedspread?
A READER.

Sponge the spot with nail polish remover or banana oil, placing an absorbent pad under the stain to catch the color as it is driven through. If this doesn't completely remove the color of the polish and if the spread is white, sponge the area with a half-and-half mixture of household bleach and water. Rinse thoroughly. If the spread is colored you might try the bleach on an inconspicuous spot to see the effect on the color. If it doesn't affect the color apply bleach to the stain but be sure to rinse all of it from the spread when the stain is gone.

Recently I left my aluminum frying pan on the gas burner much too long and the frying surface has become coated with a black substance impossible to cleanse. Please advise a remedy.
B. G.

Saturate a paper towel with household ammonia and place over the stained portion of the pan. Let stand overnight. If the frying pan has a cover, place it on as it sets overnight so the towel will remain moist. In the morning the deposit should be softened enough so that it can be removed by scouring with steel wool.

Could you advise me how to treat small twigs to be used in a shadow box frame so that they will not dry out and crumble? I plan to use glue and ground up rubber sponge for foliage. Would shellac do or must they be soaked in a solution? C. M. J.

Completely covering the twigs with a coat of shellac or high grade spar varnish should keep them in good condition. In order that all surfaces are reached, I suggest you dip the twigs three or four times in the shellac or varnish allowing time between dippings for them to dry. Before dipping tie the twigs onto a string so that they can be suspended to dry.

Here is another place where a reader who wrote you a few weeks ago can obtain fish net to use for draperies, tablecloths, etc.: Land's End Marine Supply, Inc., Provincetown, Mass. This can be obtained in various widths and meshes. I have seen these dyed beautiful colors. They are very effective. E. B. W.

To E. G. F.: You can get ginger root, file gumbo, saffron, and other unusual spices at an F st. shop whose telephone number is Executive 2654. M. S.

About E. G. F.'s inquiry on ginger root: If her recipe calls for fresh ginger root, she can obtain it in a Chinese grocery store. Any of the stores in what is known as Chinatown—H st. between 6th and 7th nw.—carry it. F. Y.

For the lady having trouble cleaning a silver-colored cigarette box from Japan, may I suggest that she try brass polish? The Orientals have a white brass that looks like silver and brass polish cleans it beautifully.
J. W. S.

I'd like to pass on to K.B.Mc., who recently wrote your column, my method for cleaning and polishing brass sleigh bells, which usually don't respond to the treatment for ordinary brass.
Remove bells from leather and soak overnight in about a quart of water containing a cup of household ammonia and a handful of baking soda. Bleaching peroxide may be used in place of ammonia. This takes the erosion from inside as well as outside the bell, resulting in a truer ring. Repeat soaking until a fine wire brush will remove all surface black, then polish the usual way. J. B. T.

British Army Invokes Old School Discipline

Malvern, England, May 30 (AP).—It was just like being back at grammar school for 30 men in the British Army's First Training Regiment.

The men missed a bulletin board order to change their bedding. The commander thereupon ordered each man to write 500 times:

"I must read squadron orders daily and change my sheets at the proper time."

Spanish-American Relief Program Set

A "veterans' reverie" will be presented by two camps of the Spanish American War Veterans to benefit the group's relief fund Thursday at 8:30 p. m. at the Metropolitan Baptist Church, 1225 R st. nw.

Sponsoring the program are the Rear Admiral Charles Thomas Camp No. 3 and the Sergeant George Berry Camp No. 10. The program is being arranged and conducted by Mrs. Ada Butcher.

What's the Verdict

TALKATIVE CABBIE

Q. A cab driver was talking over his shoulder to a passenger about the ball game, to which he had tuned his radio. The cab and a private automobile collided in an intersection, the passenger being injured. The driver of the private automobile pleaded guilty in police court to a charge of failing to yield the right of way. The passenger sues the cab company for damages, and the company defends that the guilty plea of the private driver shows the cab company is not at fault. Is that correct?

A. The effect of the guilty plea certainly is to admit that the private driver was careless, but it does not automatically show that the cab driver was free of carelessness. The driver of a cab, like the operator of any other carrier, has to drive with the greatest degree of care when hauling passengers. The guilty plea would be admissible as evidence in behalf of the cab company, but the fact that the cab driver was talking over his shoulder as he drove into an intersection would be evidence of negligence which would take the case to the jury.—F. L. D.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Heretic Espouses Novel Hattitude Toward Ladies' Hats

Our recent dissertation on "picture" hats leads W. M. O'C. to observe:

"I'm not only against women's picture hats, I'm against women's hats, and I'm against women.

"Women plop themselves down in front of you at the movies, and never dream of removing those freakish obstructions from their heads unless you ask them to. And then, likely as not, they either refuse or, in acceding, make you feel like a heel for asking.

"Why should this ridiculous custom persist? If it is impolite for men to wear their hats indoors, why is it not equally impolite for women to wear theirs. Name me one good reason. Just one."

Pay no attention to him, ladies. He's just trying to get me ridden out of town on a rail.

IT'S NO JOKE

Mrs. Bruce M. Benton of 3421 14th st. nw. wonders whether we've heard about the little boy who came home from school with a problem, and asked his Daddy for help.

"The teacher wants us to explain why the white man's civilization is superior to the Indian's," quoth little Willie.

"I don't think it is," muttered his Pop. "Before the white man came to this country, the Indians had no taxes, no debts, no unemployment, no singing commercials. And the women did all the work. How could anybody improve on that?"

HALF-TOLD TALE

Lloyd Simson of 1516 Spring pl. nw. forwards a menu which offers "Southern Half Fried Chicken" and wonders how they fixed the northern half.

NOT TODAY, I HOPE

"How stupid is a comic strip supposed to get?" asks Ann Nelson of 6520 2d st. nw.

"If anyone can top for asinine drivel the current fulminations in Mary Worth, I personally will present them with a cut-glass fly swatter. Colonial design, of course."

There was a day, Ann, when I'd have agreed with you. But that was before I saw the results of readership surveys on the comics.

I discovered that the strips which appeal to me have the lowest ratings. The ones I'd throw out of the paper if I were boss are precisely the ones which most people read.

So now I just keep my mouth shut—and pray that they take the next survey on a day when this space includes a good funny story.

PIGEON'S PROGRESS

Remember the crippled homing pigeon who dropped in on Capt. J. R. Weisser at Quantico, Va., and had his broken leg set?

Captain Weisser now reports that the pigeon's exhausted mate showed up four days ago, and has been accompanying her husband on short "shakedown" flights while his leg has been mending.

What worries the captain is that the flights are getting longer each day, and that the crippled pigeon may soon decide to strike out for home, splint and all, before he's discharged from his improvised sick bay.

THE CHILDREN'S HOUR?

A local telegraph operator wrinkled a thoughtful brow the other day when he handled a message which said:

"LION MAN AND GAMBLING DAUGHTERS LEFT BY AIR TODAY. MAD MONSTER LEAVES MONDAY."

The telegram made more sense when he noted that it was from a film distributor to WMAL-TV.

OVERHEARD

Bill Nesbitt of 14 E. Woodbine st., Chevy Chase, Md., says that a fellow passenger in a bus was reading the ads when he was heard to mutter:

"She's lovely . . . she's engaged . . . she uses Pond's. She has to. No bathtub."

Politics Ensnares B-36 Probe

By Drew Pearson

The House Armed Services Committee's probe of the B-36 and airplane contracts will make some people cringe but will be healthy for the Nation. However, the public should take a good look at both sides before it does too much condemning. Here are some of the confusing and difficult facts in the case:

VAN ZANDT

1. Congressman Jimmy Van Zandt, Pennsylvania Republican, who charges politics in B-36 contracts, is a Naval Reserve captain with a great yen to become an admiral. He is spearheading the Navy's bitter, sub rosa smear campaign against Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, and the Air Forces.

2. On the other hand, Floyd Odlum, head of Consolidated Vultee which makes the B-36, was one of the heavy contributors to the Truman campaign and helped finance the famous Truman train which made every "whistle stop."

Officially, Odlum's campaign contribution was listed as only $3,500 to the Democratic National Committee. But five executives who take orders from him also put up $25,000, and listed their contributions as "c/o Floyd B. Odlum." They were: Sam Baggett, J. R. Kansas, A. A. Pollan, vice president of United Fruit, which is controlled by Odlum's Atlas Corp.; Sam Zemurray, head of United Fruit, and John A. Werner. Significantly all five made their $5,000 contributions on the same day — November 30. In other words, they were "Wednesday Democrats" — after the Truman victory.

3. Louis Johnson, the man who collected this money for the Truman campaign and now ok's airplane contracts as Secretary of National Defense, was also a director and attorney for Consolidated Vultee, the airplane company controlled by Odlum which makes the B-36. Secretary Johnson's income from this company for the last six years for which Securities and Exchange Commission reports are available was: 1942—$16,000; 1943—$30,000; 1944—$27,665.68; 1945—$6000; 1946—$6000; 1947—$6000.

Most of the big money to Secretary Johnson was paid when Victor Emmanuel controlled Consolidated Vultee. Incidentally Victor Emmanuel also paid a retainer to George Allen, former White House jester, and made him a director of Consolidated Vultee. Odlum took over control in 1947.

Johnson Is in Clear

Despite this circumstantial evidence of political pressure, however, this columnist is convinced that political pressure had nothing to do with B-36 contracts.

Real fact is that the Air Force definitely decided to switch from the B-50 and the B-54 to the B-36 last July. Even earlier—around May of 1948, one year ago—the House Appropriations Committee was informed this change might be in the works. Congressman Engel of Michigan, like Van Zandt, a Republican, and considered the watchdog of the armed services, is familiar with this fact.

Finally in January and again in March, the Air Force board of officers conclusively recommended that funds be diverted from the B-50 and B-54 to the B-36. The March recommendation was ok'd by the late Secretary Forrestal, sent to the Bureau of Budget and the White House. The order was not actually made public, however, until April 5, just a few days after Johnson become Secretary of Defense—which, on the surface, makes it look bad for him.

The current investigation will be healthy, however, not only to clear up undercover innuendo, but because the big aviation companies have done plenty of lobbying in the past and this probe will put them on notice for the future. It will also be healthy to have the complete background of investment-tycoon Floyd Odlum brought into the full light of day.

Army Marriage

Public memory is short. It was only 15 years ago that Burdette Wright, vice president of Curtiss-Wright Aviation Co., conducted such an astute and successful lobby in Washington that he was accused by some air generals of getting the Army to accept airplanes with a shorter cruising radius.

A few years after that, Douglas Aircraft, not Curtiss, was considered the Army's chief pet. And the marriage between Donald Douglas' daughter and the son of Air Corps chief Gen. Hap Arnold was believed helpful to the flow of orders that turned the wheels at the Douglas plant.

This may have been as unfair as the current B-36 charges hurled against Louis Johnson; which is why it's healthy to have these charges aired by Congress.

Vitamin Pills for Congress

The president of the Louisiana Senate is flooding Capitol Hill with vitamin pills for worn-out Senators and Congressmen.

He is Dudley J. Le Blanc, who not only is president pro tem of the State Senate but also happens to head the Le Blanc Corp., which produces Hadacol vitamins.

Along with a complimentary bottle of vitamins for each member of Congress, Le Blanc inclosed a note of explanation:

"During the past several years," he wrote, "I have been a State Senator. Although the work of my office is not as arduous as yours, I can appreciate the fact that there are times when your duties do not permit you to eat regular meals or to eat the type of food which gives you all the vitamins and minerals your system needs to keep you in tiptop shape."
